Hitler and Napoleon
Law and Liquor
Chicago's State St. Day
Last Little Wendel Dog

—By Arthur Brisbane—

CHANCELLOR HITLER ends freedom of the press in Germany. Dr. Goebels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, expresses it thus:

"To supervise the formation of public opinion and see that it does not pursue paths leading away from the common weal is the absolute right of the state."

Napoleon put it more briefly, and frankly: "I fear three newspapers more than one hundred thousand bayonets."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., engaging experts to investigate control of the liquor problem in other countries, in anticipation of repeal, renders public service.

In a public statement, Mr. Rockefeller says: "I was born a teetotaler and I have been a teetotaler on principle all of my life. Neither my father nor his father ever tasted a drop of intoxicating liquor," and adds that the Eighteenth Amendment has failed, bringing "an evil even greater than intemperance, namely, a nation-wide disregard for law."

Those who think they can make the world and human beings over more nearly to their hearts' desire should keep in mind this other extract from Mr. Rockefeller's announcement, quoting the report of his investigators.

"Law must always be the articulate organ of the desires of living men. Men cannot be made good by force. In the end intelligent law-making reflects the knowledge or estimate of what will be obeyed. Law does not enforce itself."

Chicago, busy with the great "Century of Progress" Exposition, delighted with an attendance surpassing all past events, is also busy selling goods. On October 9, 100th anniversary of the opening of State st., Chicago's big retail business street, the city will begin a drive for the "biggest merchandising week" on record. The first day will be "Chicago Day." October 12 will be "Christopher Columbus Day," another, "Marquette Day," etc.

Other cities might borrow the idea.

From New York city a little French poodle, "last of the Wendel dogs," has been taken to an old home at Irvington on the Hudson river and buried under tall trees. "The last of the Wendel dogs" belonged to Miss Wendel, who left fifty or sixty millions, about which the lawyers have been quarreling profitably, and owned also a great house on the northwest corner of 59th st. and Fifth ave., New York, and near it a large plot of vacant ground.

When millions were offered for that lot, she said: "No, if I sell that land, little Toby will have no room to play." She died, and Toby, who had slept in a little bedside here, continued his life of ease. Now he is gone.

Red Indians would say: "He is with his mistress in the happy hunting grounds, helping her to hunt buffalo and bear." The Christian religion says: "No, they will never meet again. Besides, Miss Ella Wendel never hunted bison or bear.

Newspaper editors are often asked by readers: "Is it true that President Roosevelt has said: 'I shall be the greatest President of the United States, or the last one'?" Silly yarns spread quickly.

You may answer definitely: No, it is not true. The President doesn't pretend to read the future, and would be the last man to talk about being "the greatest President of the United States."

Anything might happen, for a little while, if everything should suddenly "blow up." But nobody knows better than President Roosevelt that this republic will remain a republic, will find men able to attend to its business, and will make them continue to work in obedience to the wishes of its citizens, modified to some extent, perhaps, by the plans of well-organized capital.

The scientific research committee of the University of Chicago, headed by E. W. Burgess, professor of psychology, has answers from 526 married couples asked what they thought about married happiness.

The majority agree that a long courtship, but not longer than one year, brings more happiness than a short courtship. Also, that the advice of fathers

Aged Women Sign Blank Deed, Lose All, Charge

BUSINESS MAN DUPED PAIR POLICE SAY

Worcester Manufacturer Held on Spinsters' Complaint

Worcester, Oct. 6—The story of how two unsuspecting old ladies were allegedly duped out of house and home by a Worcester manufacturer was recited here today in the filing of two civil suits against James Kearney, 32, of this city, who was arrested last night in Windsor, Ct., as a fugutive from justice.

He was released in $1500 bail by the Connecticut court today when he promised to appear in court here tomorrow to answer a charge of larceny.

Kearney is alleged to have wormed his way into the confidence of Miss Clara Giddings, 84, a former missionary in India, now living in Pleasant st., Leicester, and her sister, Alice, 76, a retired school teacher who lives with her.

ADMIRED ANTIQUES

He is then accussed of having induced them to sign a blank deed, which he later filled out to effect the transfer of their home and its contents to him.

According to former Dist. Atty. Howard Taft, who is counsel for the aged woman with A. B. Hayden, of Manchester, N. H., a distant relative, Kearney several times visited the women, ostensibly to admire their collection of valuable antiques.

Finally, he offered to check over their finances for them and promised to establish a bank account for each of them if they would entrust matters to him, it is charged.

When the women now facing eviction from their little waite cottage, sought to make a withdrawal against the bank accounts that Kearney promised to establish, they found there was but $1 in each account, they claim. They then submitted the matter to Taft.

ASKS CONSERVATOR

He prepared today to file suit in Worcester Superior Court, seeking an injunction which would prevent Kearney from transferring the property. He also seeks a court ruling to the effect that the manufacturer gained title to it by false pretenses, and an order restoring it to the two women.

At the same time he is asking the probate court to name a conservator to watch over their affairs.

200 Detectives Given Own Medicine in Lineup

Two hundred detectives who daily view a lineup of suspects were themselves lined up as suspects today at headquarters while a Roxbury property owner sought a man who, posing as a policeman, is attempting to extort $1000 from him in connection with a suspicious fire.

All the detectives were cleared because Israel Wine, the property owner, and two others who saw the extortionist, failed to pick out their man.

Members of the arson squad, which investigated the fire, were in the lineup with all other detectives of the bureau of criminal investigation.

The extraordinary procedure followed a definite police suspicion that an organized extortion racket in this nature is being carried on but the question of whether police or bogus police are participants was left wholly up in the air.

Two personal visits by the "policeman" extortionist, one phoney "arrest" followed by a 45-minute talk in an auto in front of police headquarters, actual payment of $35 and a series of telephone calls threatening prosecution for arson were highlights of the story told by Wine, Philip Katz of 75 Highland st., Roxbury, and Jacob Gold-

Cuban Red Flag Up on Common

A big red flag flew from the 75-foot flagpole on Boston Common today. On it was inscribed:

"Hands off Cuba!"

It was noticed by park department workers soon after 8 o'clock. They went to haul it down and discovered that whoever put it up cut the halyards. It couldn't be hauled down and a rigger was sent for to climb the pole. A large crowd gathered.

The Common has been the scene of many Communist riots but park department workers said other than the anti-boy, municipal college boys were responsible. Local Communists, they said, aren't interested in Cuba.

LINDBERGH KIN CALLS POLICE

St. Bride's-Super-Ely, Wales, Oct. 6 (AP)—Behind locked gates here today Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindberg were supposed to be visiting Mrs. Lindbergh's sister, Mrs. Aubrey Morgan.

Mrs. Lindbergh arrived from Southampton, yesterday and it was believed her husband joined her shortly afterward.

Local police leaving the Morgan home said they had been called by Morgan and that newspaper men were liable for trespass if found inside the grounds.

"I can neither confirm nor deny Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh are here," Morgan said. "If they are they wont be interviewed because it is a strict rule of the family not to give out any information."

So. Boston Priest Still Gravely Ill

The Rev. Richard A. Burke, curate at St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, was reported improved, today, at Lawrence Memorial Hospital, Medford. Father Burke is still seriously ill, however, as the result of a heart and kidney ailment. He is under the care of Dr. Thomas J. Connor of Arlington, and two specialists, Dr. William Robey, of Harvard Medical School, and Dr. T. J. O'Brien, professor of medicine at Tufts College.

Heat Wave Kills 2 in San Francisco

San Francisco, Oct. 6—Two men died, a woman was overcome, and thousands sweltered yesterday in an Indian summer heat wave which brought to San Francisco and the Bay cities the hottest day of 1933, the hottest Oct. 5 ever recorded.

In San Francisco the thermometer reached the 92 degree mark at 2 P. M.

TERRY TAKES RISK WITH HUBBELL

Cronin Picks Bullet Weaver to Tie Up World Series

By JOE CASHMAN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6—Bright sunshine breaking through the overcast skies at noon drew a capacity crowd today to Griffith Stadium where the Washington Senators were determined to even up the series in the fourth great 1933 contest for supremacy with the New York Giants.

Screwball Carl Hubbell, who tamed the Senators in the opener, was Bill Terry's surprising choice to hurl for the Giants today.

It's a bold move on the part of Memphis Bill to run his superchuckpaw back with a two-day rest against Professor Monte Weaver, who can be found on occasions teaching higher mathematics to Virginia collegians but will be seen today throwing right-handed bullet ball for Washington's American League champions.

TERRY TAKES CHANCES

Indeed, it would seem that Mr. Terry has everything to lose and very little to gain by employing such strategy.

But it fails, it might even cost the Giants the title they appeared to have safely tucked away before they entered the Capital to run into a 4 to 0 whitewash at the hands of Earl "Lefty" Whitehill.

The Senators would then have the engagement tied up, their fear of Hubbell would be gone and Hal Schumacher would have to rush back with a two-day rest tomorrow in an effort to prevent them taking the lead in the struggle.

A more conservative or timid pilot in Memphis Bill's shoes would surely pitch Roy Parmelee and give Hubbell and Schumacher an extra day of leisure.

HUBBELL TIRED

If the rookie right-hander, who is often wild but has so much stuff as can be found on either staff, happened to win, the Nats would need three straight victories to finish in front. If he lost, it wouldn't matter much. It would merely mean that Hubbell and Schumacher would have to be relied upon for the two more games the Giants must annex to succeed in this title quest. And certainly each would

Harvard Boy Shuns Business Careers

Only 12 per cent of Harvard's freshmen have expressed a desire for a business career, the annual questionnaire of the Phillips Brooks House revealed today. Six years ago, 45 per cent of Harvard's graduates actually embarked on commercial careers.

In this sharp shift away from business, the Harvard Crimson, student newspaper, today sees something more than the aftermath of the depression. Says the Crimson:

"It reflects a totally new attitude toward industry and the economic system. The romance and adventure are gone out of business. There are no more great fortunes to be made. The great days of building the country are over. Business must settle down to the prosaic job of turning out goods.

POLICE FRAUD CULPRIT TO BARE PLOT TO FOLEY

Confession to Tie Up Politicians; Hurley Gets New Proof

One of the Boston policemen involved in civil service frauds is about to confess and reveal the inner workings of the whole plot, with its ramifications in high official places, it was indicated today.

This man was extremely nervous during questioning by Civil Service Commissioner James M. Hurley and is likely to break down completely when quizzing by Dist. Atty. Foley in the belief of official investigators.

He was one of those who took and because of faking, passed the last examination for sergeant in the Boston police department.

TO BARE WHOLE PLOT

If he confesses, his story is expected to provide plenty of clues to frauds not only in this examination but in others dating back over 10 years.

This examination for sergeant, with its list of 484 who passed and were thereby eligible for promotion, has been thrown out, and Commissioner Hurley today was working on a new examination. This will probably take place on or about Nov. 18.

The Boston Evening American has learned that at least one more state employe, in addition to the "fixer" employed in the Civil Service Department, was involved in the plot.

It can also be revealed that the net is closing around the Civil Service employe through discovery that he paid off personal debts for amounts greatly beyond his means.

JURY PROBE CERTAIN

Alteration of State House records has been uncovered.

Investigation of the whole affair by the Suffolk County grand jury is certain.

A "bombshell" of far greater proportions than the one which the Suffolk County grand jury set off last June at police headquarters is in the making.

The reverberations this time will be heard especially in three police stations, in addition to headquarters.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley has informed the civil service commission the type of proof that should be available within ten days for preparation for the grand jury.

Civil Service Commission Chairman James M. Hurley, who brought about the exposure of the frauds, conducted a personal investigation himself outside of his own department, besides engaging an outside investigator, it was learned.

Commissioner Hurley plans a complete cleanup of the mess, in spite of the apparent inactivity of police officials in the emergency.

FILES ROBBED

Discovery that at least one additional state employe was involved was made when it became evident, in the course of the Boston Eve-

Supt. King Keeps His Crime Survey Secret

While police marked time in their club door collecting crusade, Supt. King again today declined to discuss the reports on vice and liquor conditions he has received from his division captains.

He admitted that replies to the questionnaires sent out were in his possession.

"Would you like to discuss them with me?" inquired a reporter.

"No, I wouldn't care to," was King's answer.

"Isn't there just something you'd like to say about them?"

"No, I wouldn't like to say anything."

"If you were I, how would you go about getting them?"

"If I were you, I'd go to the police commissioner."

The police commissioner is on his vacation.

Augustus Gill, his secretary, said he'd call the request for information about the questionnaires to Hultman's attention upon Hultman's return, but he did not know when this would be.

So the police knowledge of the present liquor and vice conditions will remain, by the time being at least, a secret.

Meanwhile the barricaded door removed last night from the Essex Social Club in Essex st., is at the Warren St. Station, equally uncommunicative. Police have invoked an old gambling law allowing them to remove barricaded doors from clubs whose proprietors have once been convicted, but in several raids have obtained nothing but the doors.

If they would only find an open door . . .

What a Gay Dinner This Won't Be!

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt evidently doesn't like to dine out much better than Vice President Garner does.

At any rate, Mrs. Roosevelt said the President would dine out in state only once next winter—with Garner—instead of with each cabinet member in turn, as was done by his two predecessors.

And it just so happens that the two who don't like to dine out will be dining together!

CRACKSMEN GET $150 IN REVERE

Safe-breakers, one of whom must have been a modern Jimmy Valentine, garnered $150 from a safe in a filling station at Broadway and Foster st., Revere, early today.

No damage was done to the safe, it apparently being opened with the combination, according to James West, the manager, who discovered the robbery.

A short distance away, a hay and grain establishment owned by George Frait in Paris ave. was also entered, but the thieves got only a small sum from the till.

Smith's Close Friend to Run With McKee

New York, Oct. 6—First intimation of the possible leaning of Alfred E. Smith in the forthcoming mayoralty battle was seen today when J. J. Hoey accepted the nomination for borough president of Manhattan on Joseph V. McKee's ticket.

Hoey is a close friend of former Gov. Smith, and was campaign manager for Mayor O'Brien last fall.

THEATER BOMB ROCKS TOWN

East Providence, R. I., Oct. 6—A dynamite bomb early today wrecked the steel and glass marquee of the Hollywood Theater, blew in the front doors of the house, shattered windows in the neighborhood, and extinguished the street lights for several blocks.

It was the third bombing in three years allegedly prompted by labor troubles.

The damage was estimated by police at about $5000.

A police captain in police headquarters, located in the Town Hall across the street from the theater, was thrown from his bed by the terrific blast and a watchman was hurled from the chair on which he was sitting in a nearby factory. Neither was injured.

Pieces of glass and steel from the wrecked marque were scattered for several hundred yards in front of the theater and in the road. Damage to the theater was considerable.

It is believed that someone buried the bomb from a passing automobile. The explosion which aroused the neighborhood for several blocks occurred shortly before 4 a. m.

On July 6, last year four persons were injured when a bomb exploded in the audience of the theater. On Dec. 8, 1931, the audience was driven from the house when a stench bomb was dropped.

Investigations revealed that labor difficulties prompted the bombings.

TWO GUARDS SHOT IN RIOTING AT FRICK COKE CO. MINE

HIDDEN GUNS FOUND AFTER ROUNDUP BY TROOPERS

Company Deputies and Strike Pickets in Pitched Battle at Coal Pits Near Uniontown, Pa.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6 (INS)—Two men were shot down near Uniontown early today as coal and steel district riots vied for the spotlight with the spiteful crack of high-powered rifles echoed by the dull roar of big-bore shotguns.

The wounded men are Harry L. Gray and F. W. Frederick, company deputies employed by the H. C. Frick Coke Co. at Colonial No. 2 mine. Neither was seriously hurt. Both were struck by shotgun charges.

Several hundred shots were exchanged between the striking pickets and company deputies. Houses of the deputies were riddled by bullets.

HIDDEN GUNS FOUND

Timely arrival of a state police detail, headed by Lieut. Thomas M. Boettner, averted what threatened to develop into a raging gun battle. Both pickets and deputies claimed the other side started shooting."

State police stopped two automobiles and arrested three miners. A revolver was found in each machine. Escorted in a thicket near the battle scene, police found two shotguns, both of which had been fired recently.

New disorders loomed in the bituminous-coal zones at Ambridge, Pa., Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, O.

Adam Petesuski, 42, a bystander, was shot and killed and a score of pickets were either wounded or clubbed at Ambridge late yesterday as bullets whistled and stones flew through a tear-gas barrage hurled down by 200 deputy sheriffs to drove 500 striking steel workers from their picket posts at the Spang Chalfant Seamless Tube Co.

TEAR GAS USED

Harvey O'Connor, newspaperman and author of "Mellon's Millions," was jailed as a "suspicious person" here. No reason was given by local police, although it was reported O'Connor had been seen in Ambridge during recent labor disturbances.

Pickets at the Steubenville plant of the Weirton Steel Co. were dispersed by tear gas bombs when 30 pickets stoned 150 workmen driven into the Pope Mill.

Two thousand steel and coal workers marched in picket lines about the mammoth plant of the Carnegie Steel Co. at Clairton. A tense situation developed when one of the pickets was run down by a speeding automobile.

The week-old "siege of Clairton" continued today. Inside the steel plant, 3000 employes—jeered as "yellow cowards" by the pickets—are being fed and lodged by the company. Officials provided them indications of nearing its end, it cards—and a radio to listen to the World Series.

Richberg Ruling Halts Mine Settlement

Washington, Oct. 6 (INS)—An action by one of Recovery Administrator Johnson's chief aides probably will delay settlement of the "captive" mine strike.

Johnson said he was "amazed" to learn in New York that Donald R. Richberg, chief counsel of the NRA, in negotiations with steel company operators of the "captive" mines, had ruled they would not commit themselves to the "check-off" if they signed the code.

The steel companies promptly took refuge behind the ruling to deny even technical recognition to employes.

Under the "check-off" the operators must deduct $1 a month from each pay envelope and pay it to the local union.

Troops Guard Mine After Illinois Battle

Harrisburg, Ill., Oct. 6—Six companies of Illinois National Guardsmen, 325 strong—are in command today of this coal mining community where 19 persons fell wounded by gunfire from infuriated pickeers attempting to stop operation at Peabody Mine No. 42.

Meanwhile, at Springfield, a federal mediator decided to lay the whole problem of the long-drawn out trouble in the Illinois coal fields before Gen. Hugh Johnson and other National Recovery Administration officials.

First NRA-er in 1683; Rome Had Slump in 130 B. C.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6 (AP)—History teaches that the pioneers who won this country from the wilderness labored from dawn to dark at their tasks, but it appears at least one of them favored the now highly publicized five-day-week more than two centuries ago.

Celebration of the 250th anniversary of the landing of the first Germans in America—those hardy Teutons headed by Francis Daniel Pastorious and a group of families from Crefeld who followed him to Philadelphia—furnishes evidence to support this belief.

One of the men who came with Pastorius was George Wertmuller of Switzerland, and a letter he wrote to relatives in Europe contains a statement which, while written in praise of conditions he found, is almost prophetic in its present-day significance.

FOR FIVE-DAY WEEK

"The farmers or husbandsmen live better than lords," he wrote. "If a workman will only work four or five days a week he can live grandly."

Pastorius landed on August 20, 1683, but the Crefelders did not arrive until October 8, and this date has for years been observed.

German-American societies prepared elaborate programs for a three-day celebration this year, including sessions of the German-American Congress at which Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador, is to speak.

Then way back in ancient Rome they had depressions, too, and from the findings of an archeological expedition just returned from Italy it would seem they had 20th century ideas of curing them.

PUBLIC WORKS 130 B. C.

Jotham Johnson, director of a University of Pennsylvania Museum expedition, which spent two years at Minturno, Italy, says excavations offered proof that Rome was the first nation to inaugurate a public works program in a drive for better times.

Johnson displayed a collection of sewer pipes unearthed at Minturno, which, he says, were laid during the rule of Tiberius Gracchus, around 130 B.C.

"Gracchus had a large following among the labor classes of the Romans," he explained. "And our excavations indicate he installed the sewer system during an economic crisis to put the laboring group to work."

Moving Day Fails to Include Razor

Detroit, Oct. 6—It was moving day, explained Modle Gray, 33-year-old Negro, when he was arrested with a razor in his pocket.

"But," asked Recorder's Judge John F. Smillen, before whom he was taken on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, "what other personal effects did you move?"

"Just the razor," Gray replied. "That's my only personal effect."

"Two to five years in Jackson prison," said the judge. "And leave the razor behind."

Steel Mills Claim $35 Limit Too Low

New York, Oct. 6—While officials of the big steel producing companies declined to comment, it has been learned I nusually well-informed circles that great dissatisfaction prevails over the $25 a ton limit set by Joseph Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, in calling for bids on 800,000 tons of steel rails.

Stock analysts insist that the cost of rails in 1932 ranged from $35 to $37 a ton, and point out that since then more exacting specifications and NRA provisions have increased the burden.

Italy's Army Closes In on Austrian Front

London, Oct. 6 (INS)—New troops movements in Italy, intended as a warning to Germany that Austrian independence must be preserved, were reported today.

The Italian army hesquarters at Verona have been moved to Bolzano, close to the Austrian frontier, and the headquarters at Florence have been shifted to Verona. Italian troops have been increased near the Brenner Pass into Austria.

Italy, it was said, is still suspicious of the attitude of Germany toward Austria.

WHEELS GEARED FOR U. S. CREDIT EXPANSION

Roosevelt Machine Is Ready to Release Cash in Banks

Washington, Oct. 6—Four great wheels in President Roosevelt's economic recovery machine were geared today to operate as a unit for credit expansion.

They are the Reconstruction Finance Corp., the farm credit administration, the crop surplus control and farm commodity price-raising machinery of the agriculture department and the treasury.

They will start whirling under direction of Henry Bruce, president of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, "borrowed" by President Roosevelt to co-ordinate the country's credit and finance forces.

BILLIONS IN CASH

The new plan will not effect any physical merging of the four units, but it is pictured as a new kind of Federal Reserve System—reserve system based on credit.

The first task will be to carry out Mr. Roosevelt's move to release billions tied up in deposits in closed banks throughout the nation. That is to be the opening wedge in the attack on bad times.

The boot and shoe industry, told by President Roosevelt that the controversial merit clause must be removed from its code of competition, today prepared to adjust plants and merchandising organizations under the NRA program.

Reaction of the manufacturers to elimination of the merit clause they had demanded so insistently was not known but NRA officials expressed confidence the industry would offer no further resistance.

SHOE CODE NEARS

The code effective Oct. 12 to effect 205,000 workers as approved fell short of meeting the demands of labor and the recommendations of the NRA Labor Advisory Board, which urged a 30 hour week and minimum wages of $18 weekly for unskilled workers, $30 for skilled and $40 for highly skilled workers, with no sectional differential and equal wages for men and women.

The manufacturers' proposals, approved by President Roosevelt, provide for a 40 hour average week but permit a 45 hour week in any eight weeks of a six months period.

3 WOMEN HURT IN COLLISION

Three Jamaica Plain women were injured, one seriously, when the auto in which they were riding was in collision with another car, operated by Mrs. Harlene F. Connearny, of Valentine st., West Newton, in Washington st., Natick, early today.

Mrs. Sarah Nagle, of the Jamaicaway, is in a critical condition at Newton Hospital. Mrs. Charles B. Currier, of Eliot st., and Mrs. Emma Curtis, of the Jamaicaway, were slightly injured and Mrs. Conneary was unhurt.

Rockefeller Sees Dry Law Repeal Soon With Crime Ban

New York, Oct. 6—Declaring his father and grandfather had never touched liquor, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a statement published today, said repeal must come, even though the immediate results are temporarily away from temperance.

Rockefeller, long an advocate of prohibition, who came out for repeal more than a year ago, declared that the first issue of liquor control in this country should be based on abolition of crime.

His statement was issued as a foreword to a Rockefeller financed liquor survey of the United States, Canada and Europe. Application of the findings of the survey are to be recommended to lawmakers soon.

Rockefelleer made it plain he still favors total abstinence in principle but that the misguided attempt to force prohibition upon a people largely opposed to it brought about widespread lawlessness. He said:

"I was born a teetotaler and I have been a teetotaler on principle all my life. Neither my father nor his father ever taste t a drop of intoxicating liquor, I could hope that the same might be true of my children and their children.

"But the regrettable failure of the Eighteenth Amendment has demonstrated the fact that the majority of the people of this country are not yet ready for total abstinence, at least when it is attempted through legal coercion.

"In the attempt to bring about total abstinence through prohibition, an evil even greater than intemperance resulted: namely, a nation-wide disregard for law, with all the attendant abuses that followed in its train."

2 HURT IN CUBA BOMB BLAST

Havana, Oct. 6 (INS)—Two persons were injured in a downtown bomb explosion here today as the Cuban Government took extraordinary precautions to protect public buildings and the American embassy against violence.

The student publication, Alma Mater, resumed its attacks on U. S. Ambassador Welles, accusing him of responsibility for the presences of ousted officers in the National Hotel, scene of a recent bloody battle.

Members of the ABC and other oppositionists complained to President Grau San Martin against arrest of their leaders and search of their homes. Opposition spokesmen claimed the government was dealing with opposition elements in the same manner as did the deposed Machado.

Spanish-language newspapers expressed apprehension over an American Legion meeting this afternoon, intimating the former service men planned to plead for American intervention in Cuba. This was denied.

11 MILLION DEAL UNLOADED ON DILLON READ

Victimized by 'Wise Guys' During Boom, Says Couzens

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—Senator Couzens (R.) of Michigan, charged before Senate investigators today that some "wise guys unloaded" more than $11,000,000 of railroad stock during the boom in 1929 on investment trusts organized by Dillion, Read & Co.

This flat assertion by the member of the stock market inquiry committee followed disclosure that investments by the trusts in two railroads, both of which later went into receivership, had depreciated to almost nothing.

The stock was acquired by joint accounts between the trusts and Dillion, Read & Co. in 1929, managed by the latter.

"Some wise guys must have been unloading on you, there is no doubt of that," said Couzens to E. B. Tracy, president of the two investment trusts.

The witness had disclosed the syndicate operations by which the stock was acquired under close questioning by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel.

DURFEE HEIR THREATENS EXPOSE IN $100,000 BALM SUIT

R. I. 'DIVORCE EPIDEMIC' MAY BE RESULT

Scion Plans to Link Others to Parties of Mrs. Turner

EXCLUSIVE

Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American.

Tiverton, R. I., Oct. 6—"A charming hostess, but old enough to be my mother."

That's the answer of Frederick J. Durfee, Yale graduate and Fall River millionaire's son, to a $100,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Jane Field Turner, his admitted companion on gay parties, the story of which, he told the Boston Evening American, "will turn Fall River upside down," if ever aired in court.

In an exclusive interview, given at the Durfee family's ocean-side home on Punkateest rd., young Durfee bared his version of "inside" details of frolics in which, he claims, not only he, himself, but half the membership of the fashionable Quequechan Club of Fall River participated, with the vivacious Mrs. Turner, blonde, and then well-to-do, acting as mistress of ceremonies.

"I'm not married," Freddy Durfee said, "and I can take this. There are plenty of others, however, who won't like it so much. If Jane Turner go to court with this present absurd claim of hers, there'll be exposures which will break up homes."

While this deft was being put forth by the Durfee family's youngest son, Dad William Durfee, reputed owner of half the business section of Fall River, was a sympathetic listener, as was Mrs. Durfee, Sr.

"They think we'll settle," Dad Durfee said grimly, with teeth set and cigar at an angle that his business competitors have learned to take as serious warning. "They're much mistaken. Suits like this must not be fought by honest defendants or no unmarried young man will be safe."

$31 FOR SECURITY

"And, anyhow," put in Mrs. Durfee practically, "Freddy hasn't any money to pay damages."

BANK HEIRESS FLEES BOMBS

New York, Oct. 5—Threats to bomb the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Cutting McLean, wealthy society widow, have caused her to seek refuge in the Tuxedo Park apartment of her father, R. Fulton Cutin, millionaire banker, it has been learned. A police guard was thrown around the daughter's town home in East 71st st., just off Fifth ave.

Demand for $30,000, coupled with the threat to "blow up your house," was contained in letters she received early this week. Servants, interrogated by Mrs. McLean's father, declared that they had observed strange men loitering in the vicinity. Shortly afterward a woman, representing herself as a representative of a fashionable photographer, attempted to see Mrs. McLean, but did not succeed. It is now believed that she may have been an agent of the extortion ring.

Bullet Kills Doctor During Auto Chase

New York, Oct. 6 (INS)—Dr. Louis Blum, 37, owner of a chain of dental offices in New York, was killed early today by a policeman's bullet aimed at a drunken driver.

The accident occurred in Harlem, where police were chasing another auto. Patrolman Joseph Sullivan, standing on the pursuing car, fired the shot which struck the dentist. Dr. Blum was driving his car, which swerved over the curb as he slumped forward in his seat, dead. The bullet had passed through his head.

Station Attendant Robbed on Birthday

Three men in an auto bearing New York registration plates are sought for handing Alfred Plunkett of Harvey st., Everett, a hold-up and the loss of $23 as a 27th birthday gift. Plunkett, an attendant at a filling station in Massachusetts ave., Roxbury, was held up late last night by the trio who drove in and asked for gasoline.

Bomb Shatters Dollfuss' Offices

Krems, Austria, Oct. 6 (AP)—A mysterious explosion early today damaged the headquarters of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' patriotic front organization here.

There were no injuries and only moderate property damage resulted, but the detonation attracted a large crowd.

BATTLE FOR LIVES OF TRAPPED MEN IN BLINDING SMOKE

Workers in Griffith Park, Los Angeles, where hundreds of men—formerly jobless—battled to save lives of men trapped by flames. They were caught in a "blind end" ravine, and 28 died while scores of others were overcome by smoke or suffered burns.

QUICK FIRST AID SAVES SOME LIVES

That the death toll did not exceed the 28 at which it was placed officially today was due to the prompt and efficient first aid ministration. Photo shows relief at the fire.

Bean-Eating '400' Spurns Hay Diet Without Cod

Hay diet? Not for Boston's bean and codfish aristocracy!

Society folk of New York, San Francisco, and way stations may experiment to their heart's content with the newest and most popular of gastronomic fads, but Boston, thank you, isn't having any.

Leading members of Boston's inner social circle were firm today in exhibiting none but a purely academic interest in the widely heralded but seemingly Spartan-like theories of Dr. William Howard Hay, advocate of the "one-track" meal.

The Hay diet's alternating all-starch and all-protein menus—however they may be calculated to brighten the eyes, clear the complexion and rid converts of that tired feeling—just somehow fail to click in practice with Bostonian first families, a checkup showed.

TRIAL "NEAR KILLS HER"

Of dozens of social registerites interviewed today, only one would confess to even so much as a tentative try-out of Hay doctrines inimical to the good old Beacon Hill tradition of Saturday beans and Sunday fishcakes.

Mrs. Francis J. O. Alsop, Indian Hollow, East Milton, matron, noted for her smart appearance, admitted she "went on the Hay diet for a week and nearly dropped dead before it was over."

Mr. Alsop, apparently of sterner stuff, is "still strong" for the Hay regime, Mrs. Alsop said with a tolerant chuckle.

Mrs. Francis A. Harding of Chestnut Hill, mother of Miss Dorothy Harding, reputed possessor of the most beautiful complexion of all this year's crop of debutantes, had managed to keep her family healthy, she said today, without recourse to Dr. Hay's suggestions or any other dietary regime.

"No I don't follow Dr. Hay's diet, and I don't know any one who does," said Mrs. Howard M. Turner of Highland ave., Cambridge, long time occupant of a safe niche in the Boston Social Register.

"And I'm too busy," Mrs. Turner added, "even to be bothered thinking about it."

Similarly unconcerned with Dr. Hay and his carefully segregated starches and proteins is Mrs. Stanley Cunningham of Milton, she said today. Neither she nor her daughter, Polly, one of last season's most attractive debutantes, can be numbered among Hay diet devotees, Mrs. Cunningham declared.

"Maybe it's another Mrs. Cunningham," she suggested, "but I know of no one who is trying the fad."

Fair Venus Warned by Court to Dress Up

Chicago, Oct. 6—Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten warned Mrs. Elinore Denninger that she "must put on something."

She was accused of posing as Venus at the Century of Progress. Meanwhile he continued the case, declaring he would not "permit any open nudity in the city of Chicago."

18,754 Woods Army Men Re-enlist

More than two-thirds of the 19,996 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps in New England have signed up for another six months, Maj-Gen. Fox Conner, commanding the First Army Corps area, announced today.

Reports show that 14,340 of the men in camp on September 30 had re-enrolled for another half year, while 4414 of the 5113 war veterans signed up for another six months.

More than 26,000 men will be grouped in Conservation Corps camps in New England this winter, Gen. Conner said.

FIRE TOLL IS 28; 68 MISSING

Los Angeles, Oct. 6 (INS)—Backfires started by inexperienced men in an effort to halt a major blaze created the flaming trap in which 28 impoverished county workmen were known to have been burned to death in Griffith public park, according to testimony today at the city pork commission's inquiry.

Sixty-eight workmen still are missing.

Through teeth, keys, knives, rings and watches, 31 charred bodies were identified. Seventeen bodies remained unclaimed.

WEST END BOY SAVES DAD IN DEATH TRY

Pulls in Fire Alarm to Aid Father in Gas-Filled Kitchen

Garbed only in his filmsy night clothes, a West End boy raced three blocks to a fire alarm box early today and halted his father's attempt at suicide by gas in his home.

Firemen and police found the boy shivering from cold and quaking with fear when they responded to the box at Causeway and Lowell sts.

MAN FOUND ON FLOOR

Hardly able to speak, the boy mumbled his fears. Rundled into the police car of Patrolmen Cutley and William Creedon of the North st. station, he directed the police to his Cotting st. home. They raced up two flights and found Charles Gravina, 45, unconscious on the kitchen floor. Gas flowed from several jets of a gas stove, they said.

Flinging open the windows, Cutley and Creedon began prone method of resuscitation and had gained considerable headway when the police ambulance arrived to take Gravina to Haymarket Relief Station.

Gravina's boy, Louis, told police he was awakened by the groans of his father shortly before 4 o'clock. He traced the sounds to the kitchen and was horrified to find his parent slipping into unconsciousness.

With no telephone in his home the boy immediately thought of the fire department and raced the three blocks to put his thought into action.

THREATENED TO KILL SELF

Doctors said another few minutes in the gas-filled kitchen would have killed Gravina. They also credited the prompt action of the two policemen in saving the life.

They were told by members of the family that Gravina had often expressed himself as "tired of living" but none had suspected that he would attempt suicide.

Owl Nearly Roasted in First Stove Fire

Walla Walla, Wash., Oct. 6—W. K. Jenkins built a fire in his stove, and got "hooted" for it.

Pulling off a back cover, he found a small owl had crawled in, possibly falling down the chimney. He took the visitor out alive, but somewhat singed.

Women Support Filth Says One of Fair Sex

In Thursday's Boston Evening American "An American Husband" praised Ruth Chatterton, noted actress, for refusing to take the part of a harlot in a projected movie. Today a woman who signs herself "Annie Laurie" continues the discussion.

Dear American Husband:

I read your piece in the Boston American yesterday, and I had all I could do to keep from telephoning and telegraphing all over the country to find out who you are.

I'd rather have ten minutes' talk with you than with anybody I've heard of for a good long while.

So you don't approve of books and plays and songs about the underworld, and you are not crazy over what our grandfathers used to call "fast women," and you don't believe that the average American men is crazy about them either.

WOMEN INTERESTED

Of course you're right, absolutely and entirely right.

The average American is bored to death with the exploitation of the person who never used to be mentioned in decent society.

A very well-known publisher had something to say on this same subject the other day, did you hear about it?

He said:

"It's the women who read the dirty books—men are not interested in filth—they know too much about it."

And if you were ever unlucky enough to be tricked into a theater where filth was being exploited you'll remember that three-fourths of the audience was made up of women.

Not flashy women either mind you that, but simply dressed everyday women, who trooped out of their decent homes and came down town to spend an hour or so in the gutter.

What on earth is the matter with them, anyhow?

What is there romantic about a promiscuous wench?

You might as well try to be sentimental over the garbage man.

He may be a decent fellow and not bad looking either, but if you like him you like him in spite of his trade and not because of it.

I shall never forget the first time I ever saw a collection of these poor forlorn souls they call "gay women."

DANCE OF FORGOTTEN

I was a young reporter and I was sent to what was known in those days as the French ball to see what was happening there.

I was young and inexperienced and I had read a book or so, that tried to cast a glamour over what is technically known as "the night life."

I was never so bored in all my life.

The "gay ladies" were so very dull, so very, very dull.

And they were not half as pretty as the girls in the graduating class of the nearest nigh school, or half so young either.

Poor things, they did try so hard to be fascinati g and startling, there was a poor soul there I remember in a fancy dress costume, of an ostrich, she took the prize for the most original dress, I think I remember—I never hear the word ostrich to this day that I don't feel a sudden twinge of pity and revulsion of that poor, awkward, overgrown ostrich, with her disheveled plumage dripping all over the place every time she tried to be "fetching."

Since that day it has been my misfortune to know through the exigencies of my profession many hundreds of these "poor, unhappy souls."

The only reason I do not waste many tears upon them is, that I have come to realize that they are for sale, not for romance, not even for the sake of primeval emotion, but just for plain everyday dollars and dimes, and even nickels.

HELP STEM TIDE

More power to you, "Mr. American Husband." I wish you'd write some more letters along the same line, we need them, and we need them desperately just now.

Maybe they'd help us stem the tide of filth that seems to be threatening to sweep away every decent ideal of the human heart.

And whisper, won't you write a letter about thieves and outlaws, and gangsters, and tell us the plain, old-fashioned truth concerning them and their "romantic" lives?

You might start something which would help the mothers and fathers of young sons, to take heart of grace.

Faithfully yours,

ANNIE LAURIE.

COACH GLENDON FILES 2D SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Columbia Crew Chief Lays Cruelty to His Brookline Wife

Barnstable, Oct. 6—Rowing on the choppy waters and rowing in the home not going together—the communications are different—Richard J. Glendon, "Young Dick," today filed his second divorce suit in five years, seeking freedom from Mrs. Marie Fahey Glendon.

Five years ago "Young Dick," new coach at Columbia, filed a divorce suit in Barnstable Probate Court, charging his wife, formerly Miss Marie V. Fahey of Brookline, with cruelty and neglect of their three children. This suit was dropped, however.

In his suit filed today the coach makes the same charges, and the case will be tried in November.

Glendon is the son of Richard A. Glendon, "Old Dick," head coach of crews at Annapolis over a period of three decades.

In 1922 "Old Dick" gave way at Annapolis to his son, who had been his assistant, and went into temporary retirement. "Young Dick" carried on at Annapolis until 1925 when he resigned because of a salary difference and became head coach at Columbia, "Old Dick" reversing the old positions and becoming his son's assistant.

In 1928, however, "Old Dick" returned to Annapolis as head coach, while "Young Dick" remained at Columbia. Two years ago "Old Dick" resigned.

Both Glendons and the family of "Young Dick" live in South Chatham, where the cruelty is alleged by the son to have occurred. In his petition he charges that Mrs. Glendon climaxed the cruelties with a quarrel on August 8, the quarrel arising over his trip to Chicago, where he had charge of the national amateur crew races at the World's Fair.

As a result, Mrs. Glendon preferred charges of assault and battery in court against "Young Dick" but she did not press the complaint and the case was dropped.

The couple were married in East Boston on May 22, 1918, as a result of a war romance.

THREATEN EXPOSE IN SUIT

MacNeil, attaching Freddy's Fall River bank account as security for that prospective $100,000 verdict, found just $31.55.

"But, seriously," Freddy Durfee said. "It's hard for me to believe that Jane Turner would be involved in such a thing as this suit.

"I think somebody must have put her up to it. That may come out if the case is tried.

"I met her first back in 1926. She was doing a lot of entertaining, so much, in fact, that she was asked to leave one apartment house, to my knowledge.

"We were good friends, but she was friends with everybody. I can't figure why she picked on me to sue when she might just as well sue half the Quequechan club's membership.

ROMANCE IDEA ABSURD

"I haven't even seen Jane for a couple of years except once on the street. All we exchanged, then, was a dirty look.

"As far as any romance ever having existed between me and Jane Turner, that's utterly absurd, and she knows it. She is old enough to be my mother. I'm saying that literally. It can be established. She must be around about 55. Why, her husband, Dr. William G. Turner, died way back in the flu epidemic of 1918, when I was only a sophomore at Yale."

Here Mrs. Durfee, Sr., Freddy's mother, interrupted. "Please understand," she said, "I'm not criticising Jane Field Turner. But generally speaking, I don't like blondes."

"Jane Turner was a generous hostess," Freddy Durfee said. "When she was in funds, up to the time of the present depression, her home was rendezvous for at least half a dozen couples.

PROMISES SURPRISE

"I was only one of the guests. I never thought I was marked for special favors. So far as marriage is concerned, it was never mentioned, to my knowledge. There were lots of folks present, on most occasions, with whom marriage ties were a tender subject.

"As dad says, there'll be no settlement of this case. If Jane Turner wants to go to court, she can. If she does, and the whole story has to be told, it will turn Fall River upside down."

That was Freddy Durfee's side of it.

Mrs. Jane Field Turner's side, today, at least, was told succinctly by legal papers in her suit, filed in Bristol County Superior Court at Taunton. In less than 50 words, the writ sets forth the widowed plaintiff's contention that Frederick J. Durfee asked her to marry him, that she said yes, and that Freddy wiggled out.

FREDERICK J. DURFEE

No less than $100,000, she alleges, will sooth her wounded heart.

And Mrs. Turner's attorney, Joseph S. O'Neill of Boston, can amplify the blonde plaintiff's tale of woe.

"Young Freddy Durfee wooed Mrs. Turner for five long years," Lawyer O'Neill said today. "And she's nearer 55 than 55.

NAME KEPT SECRET

"He asked her repeatedly to marry him and she finally accepted his offer. Then, after plans had been made for the wedding, Durfee met and became enamored of another woman. She's young and attractive, I understand, and an active member of Fall River society. Durfee cast aside the old love for the new. No, I can't just now, give her name. I know it, though, and, when this case is tried, it may be brought out. If it does, Fall River will be interested.

Mrs. Turner, herself, today was in seclusion. Her brother, Albert, with whom she makes her home in Fall River, said she was "visiting somewhere" and could not be reached. Atty. O'Neil, her counsel, said he knew her address but was not at liberty to make it public.

MARSH DENIES B. U. OUSTERS

President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University today issued a statement to deny rumors "that a number of the faculty members, including Dean Arthur W. Weysse of the graduate school and Myles Lane, former football coach, had been discharged "without notice and without any place to go."

The subject was opened last night before a gathering of the trustees and faculty of the school at a dinner of the University Senate at the University Club.

The question of the dismissal of Dean Weysse, Coach Lane, Profs. Marshall L. Perrin and Joseph R. Taylor and Robert F. Mason, alumni secretary, was raised by their colleagues.

"Dean Weysse is not out of the University at all," asserted President Marsh. "He resigned as dean of the graduate school, but he is still a full professor in the college of liberal arts as well as the graduate school.

"Prof. Perrin is 78 years old and Prof. Taylor is 75. Some universities would lay off men of their age. Boston University, however, has accorded them the consideration of being relieved of one-half their burden of work. They receive half-pay, which is more than we could pay them in the form of a pension."

In the Lane case, Dr. Marsh said the school had been eager to retain the former Dartmouth star as football coach, but that a reduction in salary was necessary. Lane would not accept this, he said.

"The finest cheese flavor I've tasted in twenty years"

CHEESE-LOVERS cheer for Chateau—and you will, too!

For Chateau is really different. It's the famous cheese treat that Borden discovered in Canada—and now makes here for you to enjoy.

It is mellow and mild—yet full of tang and character. It is a sophisticated dessert cheese—yet it's fine for the children's afternoon snack, because of the valuable body-building elements it contains.

Try Chateau. See for yourself why it has won the praise of the cheese-lovers of two nations. Get it from your grocer, in the special package that keeps it fresh, and does away with all rind and waste.

Borden offers a variety of cheese delights

If you like cheese, you should get acquainted with these other Borden treats: Borden's Swiss, Borden's American, Borden's Brick, Borden's Limburger, Borden's Pimento, Borden's Cream Cheese, Military Brand Camembert, Liederkranz.

MANSFIELD GAINS 72 VOTES ON FOLEY IN STRAW TEST

District Attorney's Lead Cut to 432 in Record Flood of New Ballots—Surprises Forecast

The Straw Ballot Test Election for Mayor of Boston broke all records today.

In excess of 990 postcard ballots were voted by the registered Democrats of Boston and were sorted and tabulated by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Under this new gaie, the grand total of straw ballots jumped to 12,884.

MANSFIELD MAKES GAIN

Frederick W. Mansfield, former State Treasurer, slashed deeply into the lead held from the start of straw balloting by Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley.

The two leaders, between them, have polled a total of 8056 votes.

Mansfield won the day's heat, 382 to 290 for Foley, and cut the district-attorney's total lead to a plurality of 432.

The two were outdistancing the field in a sensational contest which left the outcome uncertain between them.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell polled 106 votes during the day, and held third place securely over his nearest competitor, who happens to be the Republican, ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

The latest returns, with the latest standing of all the candidates, in the Interesting Straw Ballot Test Election for Mayor of Boston, conducted by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, were as follows:

William J. Foley	4744
Frederick W. Mansfield	4312
Joseph F. O'Connell	1038
Malcolm E. Nichols	745
Theodore A. Glynn	536
Joseph A. Tomasello	281
William Arthur Reilly	209
Daniel H. Coakley	192
Michael H. Sullivan	163
John J. Connors	132
Henry Parkman, Jr.	114
Thomas C. O'Brien	91
Paul A. Collins	66
Wesley D. Hamilton	51
Maurice Tobin	35
Anthony A. McNulty	26
Clement H. Norton	25
John W. McCormack	21
Michael J. Ward	14
James M. Curley	11
John F. Fitzgerald	10
John F. Dowd	8
T. J. McGrath	6
James H. Brennan	6
General Cole	6
James J. Mulvey	6
Jeremiah McCarthy	5
Andrew J. Peters	4
Mary E. Gallagher	4
J. J. Mulhern	4
Louis E. Kirstein	3
Dr. C. T. Mackey	2
Catherine R. Sheppard	2
Dr. Ray Shattuck	2
Philip Dever	2
Charles S. Sullivan	2
Louis Epstein	2
Edmund L. Dolan	2
James J. Mellen	1
Judge J. J. Kaplan	1
Alonzo B. Cook	1
Frank A. Goodwin	1
Mrs. Jennie L. Barron	1
Alvan T. Fuller	1
David I. Walsh	1
Edward A. Gallagher	1
Martin H. King	1

Following in order behind Messrs. Foley, Mansfield, O'Connell and Nichols are Chairman Theodore A. Glynn of the Boston Street Commission, and Joseph A. Tomasello, contractor, who have definitely withdrawn from the contest and ask their constituents not to favor them further.

Next in line were Chairman William Arthur Reilly of the Boston School Committee and Governor's Councillor Daniel H. Coakley. They were handicapped by their late entry into the contest for Mayor and have had a hard task to overtake the leaders.

Michael H. Sullivan, former chairman of both the Finance Commission and the Boston School Committee, followed in order, 29 votes behind Mr. Coakley.

The Straw Ballot Test Election is still in its early stage and the volume of postcard ballots pouring into the offices of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser is sufficient to bring startling changes with unexpected speed.

WORLD NARROW FIELD

Mrs. Fred Mandile of West Roxbury today wrote the following interesting suggestion:

"I suggest that you narrow down the field to the exact number of qualified Democratic candidates. I suggest, also, that you eliminate all qualified Republican candidates from the daily list in your good paper, a paper which I admire for its Democratic principles."

The suggestion is not only interesting but contains merit. There is another side to the situation, however. The voters are given the blank space at the bottom of the ballot in which to write the name of any person preferred by them for mayor and whose name does not appear upon the printed list. It is their opportunity to express their preference for any dark horse that may appear in the offing. The actual candidates have until October 24 in which to retire from the contest for mayor, if they so desire, and on the following day their sponsors could substitute some other candidate in their place. Such a candidate might be one who has shown surprising strength in the Straw Ballot Test Election.

Watch the returns daily. Look out for surprises.

The latest returns will be published daily in the Boston Evening American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

WOMAN JUMPS SURGERY BAIL

Salem, Oct. 6—A capias for the arrest of Mrs. Mary Lyons, 39, of Meadow st., Lawrence, who disappeared after she was found guilty in an illegal surgery case, is expected to be issued today.

The woman, who was free in $1500 bail, had appeared during the two-day trial of herself, two other women and a man in connection with illegal surgery performed on Ruth Anderson, 18, of Lawrence, last winter. She was absent, however, when the verdict was returned.

Augustus Sullivan, 38, of Lawrence, was found guilty of being an accessory before the fact by the jury.

is better than that of mothers, as regards children's marriage plans. The father at least can tell the daughter what kind of man not to marry.

The little man who gambles is shorn and comes back for another shearing. He ought to be warned by the announcement that 11 partners in one firm sold for $52 a share more than 100,000 shares of stock for which they paid 20 cents a share.

From 20 cents to $52 seems almost an unreasonable increase.

In addition, Mr. Pecora points out in connection with the "investment trusts," that did such efficient work in "cleaning up" speculators, that when men start such a trust there is nothing to keep them and their friends from dumping into it all "cats and dogs," worthless securities, that they may have on hand, at any price they choose to fix, the buyer of the investment trust knowing nothing about it.

Strikes continue, in spite of the wise appeal of Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, urging conservatism. Newspaper readers hear only of a few big strikes, involving thousands. But in New York city, between 14th and 59th sts., in a short walk, you may see a hundred strike "pickets" with placards, setting forth its grievances, parading in front of big and little business institutions, the latter with NRA blue eagle signs in their windows. Small strikes are innumerable.

Illinois sends unpleasant strike news from the coal mines, ten men shot, one hotel bombed, and a railroad bridge blown up. The fight is between two groups, the Progressive miners and United Mine workers, the latter at work in a mine against the wishes of pickets. Two men going by in an automobile were shot "on suspicion." The men were not killed, and the pickets apologized, when it turned out they were not miners.

Barbers Fail to Set Uniform Code

Washington, Oct. 6—How much is a haircut worth? California, which boasts of doing things in a big way, proposes 65 cents. The average for the small towns throughout the country seems to be 35 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave. In most larger cities, the rates are 50 and 25 cents.

More than 200 barbers' codes have been received by John Provera, deputy NRA administrator, and they represent just a fraction of the country's 250,000 shops.

Again this year A&P has bought the Grand Champion Baby Steer at the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield. At the same time A&P also bought many other prize baby beeves. COTTER TO FREE $8,000,000 IN MORTGAGES

Immediate steps will be taken by the Home Owners' Loan Corp. for examination of nearly $8,000,000 of home mortgages now held by closed banks in Massachusetts, it was announced today by Charles F. Cotter, Massachusetts manager.

His announcement came after he had conferred with Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy, John H. Fahey, member of the directorate of the Home Owners' Loan Corp. from Washington, and Henry H. Pierce, supervisor of liquidations of the state banking department.

Under arrangements being made, it will be possible for closed banks to take bonds from the corporation in exchange for mortgages and borrow cash against these bonds from the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

This will place at disposal of closed banks additional cash for distribution to their depositors. About 300,000 depositors will benefit.

DEFENDS LOAN TO SALEM BANK

The action of the Federal National Bank in taking a note for $90,000 from the Salem Trust Co. was nothing unusual in banking procedure, as long as collateral was all right, W. Jesse Fowler of Beverly, assistant vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston, testified today in Federal Court.

Fowler appeared as a banking expert for the defense in the suit of State Bank Commissioner Guy against the Federal National Bank for recovery of the collateral.

Guy claims the Salem Trust Co. was insolvent at the time the note, with the collateral, was handed to Federal National officials shortly before the closing in December, 1931.

Judge Lowell, agreeing with Fowler that such a transaction depended on the value of the collateral, remarked:

"If Morgan, Rockefeller or Schwarb gave their notes, a bank would know these were good. Ordinarily, a bank looks to the collateral."

Fowler added that with the note should be filed a record of the vote of the borrowing bank or corporation, showing it was properly approved.

"Would you do business with an insolvent institution?" he was asked.

"I say perhaps I wouldn't," he replied, "but as a regular rule, if the collateral was good the note would be acceptable."

12,793 Homes Saved by Loan Banks

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Home Owners' Loan Corporation reported today that its first six weeks of nation-wide activity up to Sept. 23 had achieved "gratifying results in warding off the spectre of foreclosure."

Field reports showed that 12,793 foreclosures had been prevented on properties valued at $36,033,677. Loans for $10,114,877, comprising 81,730 applications, were approved. Of these, 1774 were to be made with a reduction of the existing mortgages. The average loan requested was $5692.26.

The corporation said its bonds have met with ready acceptance. It has 257 branch and state offices.

Confession to Bare Police Fraud's Higher-Ups

sing American's investigation, that collusion between the "faking" police aspirants and the Civil Service employes was not sufficient.

This collusion was not enough to achieve the desired end, even though a man high in political circles and a police official helped as contact men.

In order to switch the examination papers, supplementing poorly written original papers with new ones on which all questions were correctly answered, it was necessary first to gain access to the files.

This was done with a duplicate key.

STATE EMPLOYE AIDS

It was necessary to have use of the time-stamp. This was done—overdone, in fact, because papers which were not supposed to be stamped were stamped, providing a tangible clue.

And it was necessary to get into the building after hours.

This was accomplished through collusion with another state employe. Ordinarily a record of such entrances and exits would have been kept. Through the influence of a relative, who is a Boston politician, the other state employe did not make the proper record.

Thus the opportunity to switch the examination papers was presented, without a telltale record.

In one instance, a record was made, but it was later falsified, according to information obtained in this investigation.

TRAILED TO CONTACT

During the time that investigations were being conducted under the supervision of Commissioner Hurley, the actions of this man conclusively proved to at least one investigator that he had some part in the fraudulent examinations.

A close watch proved he was contacting at least one person who, it is believed, acted as a "bagman" and collector of the money paid by candidates for promotion.

It has been learned by the Boston Evening American that the other state employe's relative, who formerly held state office, is situated in a district where several of the leading police candidates are on duty.

Furthermore, at least one of these candidates was favored in more ways than one by this politician during the years he was actually holding office.

This same politician figured closely in the wire-pull exposure in the Boston police department but was never publicly named because of his influence on Beacon Hill.

Commissioner Hurley's personal investigation of the police mess included conferences with Paul E. Tierney, former Civil Service Commission Chairman and now Public Utilities Commissioner, who collected considerable information and methods used by police officials in trying to "put over" certain favorites.

GIVES FOLEY FACTS

The commissioner said he will give the name of the employe he suspects to Dist.-Atty. Foley if Foley wants it but added he did not want to be placed in the position of a man who might be trying to tell the prosecutor a method of procedure.

BRITAIN WANTS DOLLAR FIXED

Washington, Oct. 6 (INS)—Something besides mere reduction of Great Britain's $4,000,000 debt to the United States has been injected into the current negotiations between treasury officials and the British financial mission.

The British want the dollar stabilized in relation to the pound sterling.

Decision rests with Mr. Roosevelt. Congress has the final say about debt reduction, but in regard to stabilization the President has the last word. He opposed it last June.

The next few weeks are expected to determine whether there has been a change in this policy. The President's own advisers are divided upon it.

berg of 111 Brunswick st., Roxbury.

There was a fire last June in Wine's home at 26 Crawford st. It was listed as suspicious following an investigation by Detectives Salvatore Di Natale and Louis Pinkofsky of the headquarters arson squad. Two men from the bureau of records went to the scene and made pictures.

There was no prosecution after the probe was completed, however, and an insurance company paid $4000 to Wine, who is said by police to be a "straw" for his wife.

Goldberg, who is a builder and Katz, who is his helper, were hired by Wine to rebuild the house. They were at work one day when a man they described as about 40, five feet eight, stocky and dark complexioned and wearing a blue suit, appeared on the premises and asked to see Wine. Goldberg took him to Wine and the visitor said he was a policeman. He did not, however, show any badge.

"You got a $4000 insurance on this house," the visitor said. "If you want to stay out of the big house you better come across with $1000."

TALK AT HEADQUARTERS

Katz didn't hear the conversation but witnessed it taking place. After some dickering during which Wine and Goldberg said they had no such amount of money, Wine said he would pay $200 "on account" just to get rid of his visitor.

No payment was made and Wine received many phone calls. One day the visitor again appeared. Goldberg was working and he told the contractor:

"All right, take off your overalls and come to police headquarters. I want to question you about the fire."

Goldberg stepped into the policeman's car and was driven to the Berkeley st. front door of headquarters. There, he said, he and the "policeman" talked for 45 minutes. Goldberg was afraid, he said, that Wine was being framed and he paid the "policeman" $50.

Also he spent $5 for food and drinks for the "policeman."

FEARED FRAME-UP

"You go and tell Wine to give me $1000 or I'm going to make trouble for you both," said the "policeman," releasing Goldberg.

Goldberg told Wine and was reimbursed by Wine for the money he had paid over. Wine said he, too, was afraid he was being framed.

He never paid any more money but the telephone demands are being received.

Deputy Supt. McDevitt ordered the lineup after hearing the story. Similar stories have followed similar fires. The deputy is hopeful that he might make an arrest.

500 Strikers Herded for Vineyard Killing

Ladd Gay, Oct. 6—Five hundred striking grape pickers have been herded into the city park here and are under armed guard after Matt Tanzola, 24, a striker, was shot to death.

Tanzola was a member of a citizens' committee that had marched on strikers in mass power and prevented picketing. He told officers that 12 Negro, 45, also known as Matt Kurat, shot him.

HITLER WARNED BY MUSSOLINI ON AUSTRIA

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

(Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.)

London Oct. 6—Premier Mussolini has given Chancellor Hitler another warning that Austrian independence must be preserved and that Italy will not tolerate any armed adventure by Austrian Nazi with the aid of German Nazis.

To emphasize the warning it is learned [illegible] Italian army headquarters at Verona have been moved to Bolzano near to the Austrian frontier and headquarters at Florence have been pushed up to Verona.

Chancellor Hitler, it is reported has given private assurance to Mussolini that Germany intends to respect Austrian independence but Il Duce is understood to have told Hitler the German government should make a more official pronouncement to this effect.

Mussolini's attitude is seen reflected in an article published in the new newspaper Popolo D'Italia. The writer is said to be Virginio Gayda, a confidential friend of the secretary of Herr Hitler's party who informed the countries concerned that "such anxieties are insensate."

The Keyhole on the News

Pup Talks

"I've been reading the interesting dog feature in the American for several days," says Charles Garton, cus'tian of the old State House, "and there's just one slant about dogs that may interest you. They are the absolute solution of a problem for persons who are lonesome or who like friendly talks.

"I was never interested in dogs much, until a little Boston terrier saved my entire family by barking during a fire. I got into the habit of taking him with me everywhere. He and other dogs I have had since, provide fine company in themselves and almost invariably lead to pleasant conversations with persons who like dogs, too."

Impatience

Lawrence Gross, veteran school teacher, was recently coaching some kids who wanted to learn to play soccer football.

"The idea of the game is to keep the ball in action. Never handle the ball, just kick. This is a constant kicking game. Just kick.

A tough young kid stood beside him during the talk.

"Now where's the ball," said Mr. Gross, finally.

"Aw, never mind de ball," piped up the scowling lad, "let's start kickin' right now."

Service

Elevator service in Boston reached a new high and stayed there yesterday with the result that prospective passengers felt pretty low until late afternoon.

The World Series made every radio a magnet, Mecca or menace, and in most instances the elevator operators selected some radio high up and came down only when the bells rang a welkin. Usually the person ringing the bell so insistently merely wanted to ask the operator what the score was.

You could tell a man who really wanted a good ride on an elevator by the strange expression on his face.

Time Saver.

Recently an office boy was hired by a firm in Boston which each day found it valuable to know what the weather of the following day might be. Late reports

The boy who had been employed on his reiterated statement that, he didn't care how much work he had to do, had very light work except that at 10:30 at night he was to get the weather report for the following day.

After two weeks he spoke to his employer about it.

"I wondered," he said, "whether you would mind having me get the report at 10 o'clock at night. You see the weather bureau is on the 10th floor and the elevator stops at 10 o'clock. Mind, you, I don't mind the climb at all, but I figured you wouldn't want me to waste that much time."

About People:

John W. Newman, president of the Democratic City Committee, is an L st. Brownie of the first splash . . . . . Atty James Leo O'Connor, trustee of the Norfolk County Agricultural school, has often been mistaken for the twin of Gov-Gen. Frank Murphy, of the Philipine Islands—in fact, the resemblance is astounding . . . Coach Thomas Scanlon, of Brighton High school, was a crack speed-ball pitcher in his college days at Holy Cross . . . . Senator Joseph Langone, Jr. believes the Franklin Park links is his lucky golf spot . . . . Patrolman Joseph Whitehead, was one of the brawniest oarsmen ever turned out of East Boston . . . . John E. Baldwin, clerk of committees, believes that the roughest, and toughest of all sports, is ice hockey . . . he goes for it. . . . . Atty. Timothy Murphy, of Dorchester, was one of the classiest football and baseball players ever developed at Dorchester High school . . . . Although he had never played the game of golf in his life, former Sen. William I. Hennesy was coaxed into a match by Francis Jugins and J. Newton Esdale, and he then proceeded to defeat them with comparative ease'

Atty. Joseph McDonough thinks Boston terriers are the best of all—maybe its his civic pride . . . Joseph Dempsey of the assessor's office, City Hall Annex, years ago played for the Chinese Dipper basketball team, one of the best ever to come out of the D st. gymnasium . . . Officer Al Cappolini, of the Quincy police force, is considered a keen judge of boxing bouts . . . Although the summer has flown, Joseph A. Hennessy, of the Teachers' College, still takes his daily swimming dip . . . . Gus LeGuerre, freshman grid coach at Boston University, has filed papers for examination to the police force . . . Paul Everit, of the Brighton-Allston Post American Legion, shone in three different sports at English High School as a youngster . . . OLSEN AND JOHNSON START AIR SERIES

Comics Launch New Feature Tonight

By N. F. T.

To be sure it's welcome word coming East from the West to tell of Olsen and Johnson being starred tonight and each Friday night henceforth (WNAC) at 10 o'clock what of it if they are going to carry on their clowning as two merry "staff members" of a make believe newspaper? No doubt the journalistic realm scribes who turn out daily reading matter are gun for some ribbing at the hands of those two. Good naturedly, of course, which is how Olsen and Johnson always do everything.

BRICKBATZ AND BOKAYS

Should that be the proposed program plan, it's unique methinks. If smartly done, such humor will work exceedingly well. After all, they will find themselves getting back about everything they let fly, perhaps more. Readily may it be cheerfully said of both boys, they can "take it" like the big timers they are. It is further understood their new network bit is based on procedure in the building of a paper they facetiously call the "Comedy News" with the orchestra men acting as "Printer's Devils" when not occupied playing specified music.

Prominent people in the provisions packing business out Chicago way will promote the above air attraction. While it's a bit early to start picking on this playful pair, there's nothing quite like putting in the proverbial first punch. Certainly the makers of a very choice "Ham" made no mistake choosing Messrs. Olsen and Johnson as a team to sponsor. O. K. there now O & J—go to it and Good luck!

FLEETING FLASHES

Graham McNamee reported seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning and is missing from the first World Series in his broadcasting career. There's a new comedy model radio receiver coming on the market soon, built from a midget "Mickey Mouse" pattern, although said to embrace every construction feature of big sets. . . Saturday night (WEEI) finds jolly Jack Pearl back again as "Baron Munchausen" at the stroke of 8 o'clock. . . His sidekick "Sharlie" will be there with him as of old . . . Senor Gene San Martin, he who is now the Cuban president, is afraid to tell America about how things stand or don't down that way speaking over NBC channels between 8 and 9 Saturday night.

LOCAL LATHER.

Irwin Cowper, for so long a member of the WNAC-WAAB announcing staff, has severed Yankee Network connections here to journey toward Washington . . . Martha (WAAB) Lee had a bit of an argument with the "Globe Trotter" yesterday over pronunciation of the word "De Luxe," which was steadfastly held to be "De Looxe" by one and "De Lucks" by the other. Martha being a home economics exponent, feels that a Lever Bros. program would call it "De Lus," which fact the advertising department is especially invited to carefully note . . . Much discussion of late over having the snappy Herbert Marsh dance orchestra tunes networked out of Boston to other cities from the Hotel Bradford Cascades Roof, through WBZ-WBZa facilities . . . National Dramatic Players, now staging stock company productions at the Wilbur Theater, start a series of 15-minute microphone matinee playlets today (WEEI) at 4:30 . . . Plans rumored under consideration to put on a special "Radio Night" at the new and bon-ton Club Tourains, with local air favorites featured.

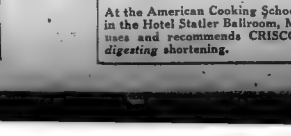
You can't fool your stomach

So cook with CRISCO . . . the wholesome fat that digests quickly!

For goodness sake, go away if you must make so much noise!
Aw, she's nice but she's got one of her stomach spells!
Gee, but your mother's cross!
ONE OF MOTHER'S OFF-DAYS

Look here—the paper says to use Crisco because it digests quickly. I wonder if Crisco would help me!
Why don't you try it? It's a pure wholesome fat.
MOTHER READS A TIP



Come in, boys. How'd you like to try some Crisco cookies—they're good for you!
Didn't I tell you that she's as nice as your mother? She's this way all the time now!
MOTHER'S FINE NOW!

Don't mistreat your digestion. Treat it kindly with luscious flaky Crisco pies and crispy Crisco-fried foods. Your stomach doesn't have to work overtime on foods cooked with Crisco. Crisco is the light, creamy wholesome fat that digests quickly.

So make all your favorite pies now with Crisco! They'll come out of the oven so flaky and golden—not greasy and slow to digest! And fry with Crisco. No fear of soaked foods if you fry properly with Crisco—heat your Crisco so hot that foods are instantly sealed in a crispy brown. They'll actually look "dry-fried."

By Crisco's own secret process sweet pure oils are changed into a fluffy creamy quick-digesting shortening. And Crisco stays that way without ice-box help.

Always look for the familiar blue-and-white label when you buy Crisco. Crisco is packed in sanitary, vacuum-sealed cans for your health protection.

MACARONI MEDLEY

1 onion
2 green pepper
4 tablespoons Crisco
1 lb. hamburger
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup tomato soup
½ cup water
2 cups cooked macaroni
¾ cup grated cheese
1 cup left-over cauliflower

Chop onion and pepper. Fry in Crisco (the digestible fat) until golden brown. Add meat and seasonings. Stir and fry for 5 minutes. Mix soup and water. Add to meat mixture. Stir well. Put half of macaroni in baking dish. Sprinkle with cheese. Add layer of meat. Make layer of macaroni, cheese, and meat again, saving out some cheese for the top. Arrange cauliflower flowerets over top. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover dish. Cook in moderately hot oven (375°F.) 25 minutes. Remove cover. Bake 10 minutes longer until nicely browned.

At the American Cooking School, conducted this week in the Hotel Statler Ballroom, Mrs. Frances Northcross uses and recommends CRISCO, the modern, quick-digesting shortening.

CASH IN CLOSED BANKS TO BE FREED SOON

Approximately half of the frozen deposits in the 376 national banks recently ordered reorganized by the federal government will be available to customers, according to word received from Washington today.

The National City Bank of Chelsea and the First National Bank of Revere are among the score of New England banks affected by the order which was issued about a week ago.

All of these banks have been in the hands of conservators since the national bank holiday last March. They have been open for new business but it was impossible to draw on old accounts.

The Treasury Department today estimated that the 376 banks had assets totaling $338,565,000, as well as about $51,151,000 in unrestricted deposits made since the holiday.

It was explained in Washington that the total of the frozen assets represented their value on the books of the banks when the conservators took charge. It is seen impossible to liquidate the entire amount it was stated but in most cases at least 50 per cent of a depositor's fund will be made available with further dividends just as soon as it is possible to convert more of the frozen capital into cash.

The banks in Massachusetts whose reorganization plans have been approved as of Sept. 20, follow with the amount of frozen deposits and amount of unrestricted deposits, are:

Chelsea National City, $734,000 and $31,000; East Pepperell First National $516,000 and $45,000; Franklin Franklin National $1,192,000 and $67,000; Millbury Millbury National $470,000 and $15,000; Reading First National $1,250,000 and $55,000; Revere First National $359,000 and $17,000; Woburn, Tanners National $676,000 and $45,000. Total $5,414,000 and $355,000.

Chelsea Police for Election Officials

A plan to have Chelsea policemen act as precinct officers at the primaries October 24, was taken under advisement by the board of aldermen in that city today.

The plan never before tried anywhere in the state, was conceived by Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley as an economy measure.

The measure is expected to save the city $294 at the primaries and a similar amount at the election.

TEST No. 2

How long can you point at a mark on the wall without considerable wavering? Here's a sure way to show up nerves. It's used by many well-known doctors. A good score is two full minutes.

Score of Vereil Pickard (Camel smoker), world-famous sharpshooter: 4 minutes, 40 seconds

Copyright, 1935, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

Jangled nerves bring words that hurt

Suppose a hidden phonograph were taking down your words all during the day. How often would you be embarrassed and shocked at the things you may have said under the stress of jangled nerves?

A sharp word, a fit of temper, an unfair accusation—these hurt your friends and your loved ones—and they hurt you, too.

Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

CURLEY TO BACK FOLEY OR O'CONNELL

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

With withdrawal of School Committeeman William A. Reilly from the mayoralty contest the prospects for a Democrat to succeed Mayor Curley were regarded as considerably brighter today.

As the field now stands five Democrats and three Republicans remain in the race.

It was also learned today that Mayor Curley may throw his support to one of two Democratic candidates remaining in the field of five. Reliable authorities said the Curley endorsement would probably go to Dist. Atty. Foley or former Congressman O'Connell.

Chairman John W. Newman of the Democratic City Committee, after praising the action of Reilly today, said that he looks for at least two more Democratic candidates to put the party's interests above their personal ambitions before Oct. 24, the final date set for retirements from the contest.

FAVORS NO CANDIDATE

In a statement announcing his decision to get out, Reilly said the present large number of candidates may bring about the election of an inferior candidate for mayor.

"At this time when political unity is so necessary to welfare of the city, the state and the nation," he said, "I refuse to contribute to any dissension or confusion in the present campaign."

He stated that he was not retiring in favor of any other candidate and thanked his loyal friends who supported him and secured more than 8000 signatures on his nomination papers.

The delay by the Good Government Association in announcing its endorsement of a mayoral candidate is retarding to a large extent the progress of the campaign. Practically every Democratic leader in the city, it is known, is waiting for G. G. A. decision to come out into the open.

COOK MAY DROP OUT

Among these is Mayor Curley who expects to arrive back from Washington next Sunday.

The Republican City Executive Committee of which Herman Hormel is president, meets next Monday at the headquarters 6 Beacon st. to discuss what action, if any, will be taken in the mayoralty contest.

Because of the fact that Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., is a member, the committee may decide that the best way out of an embarrassing position is to adopt a neutral course between Parkman and Nichols. Rumors are beginning to be heard that the third Republican in the race, former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, is undecided as to whether he will stay in.

Former Mayor Nichols, at meetings in Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and the South End, charged that a "Fuller-Foley alliance" was responsible for the entry of Senator Parkman into the fight.

"Speaking about the 'new deal' which Mr. Foley is advocating," Nichols declared, "will he tell the voters of Boston how the 'new deal' figured in the conference he held with ex-Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Malden just before that gentleman trotted out Senator Henry Parkman as a mayoralty candidate?"

Nichols has placed two members of the House of Representatives on his campaign committee. They are Rep. Hyman Manevitch and Samuel H. Cohen, both from Ward 12.

O'CONNELL PROTESTS

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell has protested to General Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery administrator, the espousal [illegible] of Senator Parkman's candidacy by Miss Margaret Weisman, one of the NRA officials here.

In his telegram to General Johnson, the former congressman complains that Miss Welsman "expresses her own connection with the NRA thus giving the public the impression that her endorsement of Mr. Parkman commits the National Recovery board to his candidacy."

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, in numerous rallies throughout the city, deplored the fact that some of the candidates are indulging in personalities rather than discussing issues which might be for the benefit of the city.

"In my opinion the people of Boston," he said, "want a mayor who will see to it that the city receives full value for every dollar invested, that assessments are made to conform with existing values and taxes are lowered.

"They are entitled to an efficient administration and the man who seeks to give it to them might better confine his campaign activities to issues of live interest."

ENDORSES PARKMAN

Joseph G. Sullivan of Dorchester, former president of the Ward 13 Progressive Club, has endorsed the candidacy of Henry Parkman. He is the second [illegible] Democrat to support Parkman.

Frederick W. Mansfield, in speeches at several rallies, warned the voters that they cannot expect relief from the lax burdens until there is a change in the type of administration. He characterized former Mayor Nichols as a "which" mayor. But the men this year are doomed, [illegible] dicted.

FORD OFFICIALS WAIT PICKETS

Detroit, Oct. 6 (AP)—If striking workmen from the Edgewater (N. J.) and Chester (Pa.) assembly plants of the Ford Motor Company reach Dearborn to picket the main Ford plant, they will be the first Ford strikers ever seen there.

In Edgewater the strikers said they expected to start picketing the Dearborn plant Monday, with a general strike there as their objective. Ford officials here would not comment.

V. E. Doonan, chairman of the Dearborn safety committee and in charge of the police department, said that since there has never been a strike at the main Ford plant, he knew of no precedent by which to be guided.

Other Dearborn officials includ[ing] Mayor Cook, M. F. [illegible] a director of Henry Ford, and Police Chief Carl A. Brooks have declined to discuss what their attitude would be toward bona fide Ford strikers who invaded the city.

Two years ago, four persons were killed when Dearborn police [illegible] Ford strikers.

'OPERATOR 13'--By Robert W. Chambers -:-

Gail's Beauty Finds Her a Place in Richmond's Most Select Society Unsuspected

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan Production made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Scobell found for her a nice little victoria and horse. Understanding horses as he did, having served apprenticeship as a slave under his Scotch Mississippi master whose name he now bore after being made free, he drove as coachman for the beautiful Miss Cleburne or, when she rode, followed her as groom.

Thus, thanks to him, the little household on Franklin st. was launched without delay and there were no counter-spies in it.

It was in a strange, bewildered, nervous, crowded city that Operator 13 had taken up her residence—a city that had been for years within hearing of the enemy's guns; a city constantly beleaguered behind its vast system of fortifications and the armies guarding it.

But the girl discovered it to be a desperately gay town in its tragic determination to keep every bit of the inhabitants' wits in motion; the place was full of sick and wounded officer in St. Paul's church and a frightened vortex of people gathered every day as details of the constant fighting were printed. Confederate White House was a sad home for the President and Mrs. Davis, deep in mourning for the accidental death of their little son, Joe.

GALLANT CITY

But Richmond was a brave city of gallant folk who resolutely tried to ignore the gathering gloom and journey forth to foregather with their friends. For to brood at home was unendurable.

It was known immediately that another beautiful woman was in that town of beautiful women—Miss Cleburne. The Cleburne name, and the first glimpse of her in church, that Sunday, set the aristocracy a-twitter.

It did not take long. Mrs. Preston spoke to her she visited Mrs. Webb's hospital in the afternoon and there Preston Hampton, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Breckenridge and Constance Cary, Mrs. Howell and Burton Harrison came in. Then Mrs. Semmes and the Misses Preston. It was very easy, now.

At evening service there were in church generals enough to officer an army corps, and many youngsters and their families, wives and sweethearts.

Major Venable and a lovely Preston girl they called "Fuck," and a lame general—gouden hair and beard and viking eyes in his long, and young face—these took charge of her. And she drove home in Mrs. Davis' carriage with the lame general, whom they all called Sam, and who turned out to be the simple-minded, headlong John Morgan.

Then a lovely Miss Hazall a Mrs Stanard and a Col. and Mrs Fry took her to Mrs. Webb's where was supper of oysters, partridges and champagne; and where every one fussed, except her own had been turned. though many a necklace of pearls and diamonds glimmered in the gas light.

QUICK CONQUEST

Veiled shyly by the golden lashes, the dark eyes and golden hair had done their devastating work among the youth of the feverish Southern city. To all charities, all hospitals, nursing circles, sewing circles Operator 13 was bidden. Everywhere the sister of young Cleburne was welcomed. And always, everywhere around her young men in gray and gold—many of them lame or handed—gay, handsome, jesting lads who made the most of arrowy hours and a word aflame hurtling toward destruction

Courtships were swift, with Death sitting in the prompter's box and the vast curtain trembling toward descent.

Mrs. Ould and the colonel, commissary of prisoners, gave a tea for the beautiful Miss Cleburne

The Webbs gave a ball. There was a proposal in the dressing room (room a big blond boy on crutches. Another on the stairs—middle-aged major has three sons, very fiery. They were all quite mad about her, the Kentucky contingent, Tennessee, the Carolinas, Georgia, Virginia.

At the Ives theatricals where Mrs. Clay played Mrs. Malaprop and Constance Cary made a lovely Lydia Languish, the sad-faced, obvious Hood whispered his discovery in her ear: "I believe that fellow Acres is a coward!" And Breckinridge nearly died of suppressed mirth.

INTERRUPTED GAIETY

In the farce which followed Operator 13 was cast for the lead and her professional dancing and singing astounded everybody. Amid a tempest of cheers and clapping she responded to the curtain call, but they wanted her to sing or do something; and a colonel of cavalry passed a banjo to her across the footlights, not knowing whether she could play it.

So, adjusting the ribbon sling across her shoulders, the girl sang the Negro "Christmas Day" spiritual for them.

Big star shinin' in de sky,
Chris'mus Day!
Chris'mus Day.
Mary, she come runnin' by What de matter? Mary cry,
Lawsa-mercy, los' mah way!"
Mary wuz in pain
Baby born on Chris'mus Day,
Angels sing an' angels pray
In de manger Chris'mus Day!
A-a-ll day
Chris'mus Day!"

They didn't want to let her go but Hood's body servant, Cy, came to whisper to the lame general who got up immediately; and in the sudden silence, the sound of cannonading shook the chandeliers till the prisms tinkled

Operator 13's reports to Col. Sharpe were clear, unburied, concise all written in No. 7 cipher. Sometimes Scobell took them into Glendale for Jack Babcock; sometimes Billy Dix, in dusted boots and rugged dress of a farmer boy, peddling vegetables and eggs, drove his bony mule and cart across from Drewry's Bluff and always sold Scobell something at the kitchen door, and took the dispatches back to Drewry's Bluff protected by Rear Cold Harbor.

One day she saw a huge wounded officer in St. Paul's church Maj. von Borcke, and experienced a tiny pang of fright. But the big cavalryman could have no recollection of the little mulatto laundress at Jeb Stuart's quarters.

The only real anxiety that the girl had was dread of the real Miss Cleburne's sudden return when some blockade runner slipped into Wilmington. With this ever-threatening death warrant in mind, she knew about her pleasures and her duties in a role so perfectly befitting her that insensibly the tragedy of it invaded her that she—whose business was their betrayal—should be so welcomed, trusted and beloved by these gentle folk.

SMASHING ONWARD

But Gen Grant, hammering at Lee, smashing his grey way toward Petersburg, wanted information.

Bragg, with his tactless temper had gone, Wily Joe Johnston had gone also, replaced by a Texan, addled Hood, ordered to find and fall upon Sherman.

"He want to know," wrote Col. Sharpe, "whether Lee means to throw any troops into Petersburg."

John Scobell took the answer of Operator 13 to the Glendale tavern, whence Jane Babcock and his wiry horse, Gimlet, flew northward with it

On June 18 the First Maine Heavy Artillery lost 70 per cent of its men in seven minutes. In a week the two regiments lost sixteen hundred out of two thousand. In the Fifth Georgia 94 per cent fell in one fight; the ranks were lost to the Eighth Tennessee. And now to the beautiful Capitol on the hill to the end of all things was approaching—invisible as yet—moving just beyond the smoke fringe across the James and like concussion of its awful tread shook all the world.

On that beautiful June morning the beautiful Miss Cleburne chose to ride her beautiful horse, wearing her beautiful English riding habit which, molded to her as elastically as her own delicately beautiful skin, displayed beautiful horsemanship and her utterly beautiful proportions for the benefit of heaven and earth alike. John Scobell, immaculate in his groom's brass-buttoned skirted coat, breeches and boots, ambled along behind her

Cherokee rose hedges were in snowy glory; mocking birds sang in China trees; orioles in elms, and the James rushed dashing between its tufted reeds. She proceeded slowly, along the river because so many demoiselles and gallants hailed her with gossip or grace, that she was some little distance from the city before the road became clear and solitary.

She was thinking of nothing in particular. Letters and notes and messages required by social usage had been answered and dispatched, marketing checked up; bankbook balanced; Confederate money in strong box counted; servants paid; flowers, wine, fruit, books, papers sent to hospital . . . Not so bad.

That sunny tranquility, resultant, possessed the girl with the superior feeling that she was prepared for anything the day might offer her.

SUDDEN TERROR

There came into view, lounging in their saddles, the handsome Mrs Penn; Maria Lewis, who was Maria Freeland; Betty Mike, who was Betty Bierne; Dr. Le Conte, of the powder factory; Capt. Ashmore, Maj. Von Borcke and a younger officer whose careless saddle-suppleness galvanized the girl's brain into of recognition and touched with exquisite fright the sensitive nerve of fear,

At a distance, even, she knew him for a certainty, though he wore the Confederate gray and scarlet of the artillery.

She drew bridle and said to John Scobell, without turning her head. "The artillery officer is John Gallaud," and a moment later they confronted her with uplifted riding whips and wide-swept hats and caps.

Premonition grips Operator 13 as she thinks of Chancellor, that element of Confederate spies. Would her disguise get her by? She devoutly hope so. Read tomorrow's instalment, full of thrills.

Pot Roast of Beef With Sauce of Horseradish Makes Good Meal

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

HAVE YOU BEEN hiding some of the first-of-the-month bills from husband's eagle eye? Why not suggest feeding the brute some of the things that Mrs. Northcross made yesterday up in the Cooking School at the Hotel Statler.

Mrs. Northcross' Pot Roast of Beef, with Horseradish Sauce, was a delicious penny saver. And her Nut Marmalade Bread is ideal for Sunday suppers or midnight pantry raids.

Pot Roast of Beef

4 to 6-lb. piece of beef.
3 tbsps. shortening.
Salt, pepper and flour.
½ cup water.

Rub meat with salt, pepper and flour. Brown all sides in shortening. Slip low trivet under meat, add water and cover tightly and simmer until tender, about 3 hours. Turn occasionally. If desired, add vegetables during last hour of cooking. GRAVY: Skim off 2 tbsps. of fat, add 2 tbsps. flour and cook and stir until well blended and slightly browned. Add 1 cup of roast stock or cold water. Stir until smooth. Season with salt, pepper and chopped parsley.

Horseradish Sauce

4 tbsps. grated horseradish.
1½ tbsps. vinegar
½ cup heavy cream.
½ tsp. salt.
Few grains cayenne
Seasoning.

Mix ingredients and fold lightly into stiffly beaten cream

Nut Marmalade Bread

3 cups flour.
½ tsp. salt
1 cup milk
½ cup orange marmalade
1 egg.
6 tsps. baking powder.
1 tbsp. shortening
1 cup nut meats.
2 tbsps sugar

Sift all dry ingredients. Cream sugar, shortening, egg and marmalade. Add alternately dry ingredients and liquid. Nuts added last. Mix well. Put into greased pan and cover. Let it stand 30 minutes. Bake 40 to 50 minutes in moderate oven, 350 deg. F.

Chocolate Cream Roll

3 eggs
3 tbsps flour
1 tsp. baking powder.
¼ tsp salt
¾ cup powdered sugar
2½ tbsps cocoa or melted chocolate

Beat the egg whites until stiff. Beat the egg yolks until thick and fold them into the egg whites, then mix into this the sifted and mixed dry ingredients. Beat, then spread on the oily roll pan, which has been lined with waxed paper but do not rub the paper with shortening.

Bake in a moderate oven, deg.) 15 minutes. Remove from the pan to a damp cloth lightly sprinkled with powdered sugar. Remove the paper and cut off the crusty edges. Roll up on a damp cloth. Let cool and then carefully unroll and spread with sweetened whipped cream. Roll up again. Then slice in two and serve. There should be enough whipped cream for a filling.

Empyema May Come From Bad Cold

By Dr. R. S. COPELAND

TOO few persons realize the danger of a common cold. In addition to being disagreeable and disabling, it may lead to other serious disorders. So insidious and [illegible] that many cases of pneumonia [illegible] are [illegible] when [illegible] heart and kidneys [illegible] can be traced to the common and often neglected cold. Today I want to tell you about empyema, which [illegible] a complication of neglected colds.

Dr. Copeland

Empyema is the name given to a collection of pus in the chest cavity. The pus may be confined to one area or may spread to the entire chest cavity. Empyema is caused by the germs attacking the lungs and may cause pus formation. Empyema, which is really an accumulation of pus within the lung, then results.

The victim of this affliction has marked difficulty in breathing. This is due to the accumulation of pus and the pressure on the muscle spaces in the lung. A high fever is caused by the absorption of the pus from the pus in the lungs. Pain is present and one tends to restless and appears extremely sick.

The disease may be mistaken for pneumonia or pneumonia. When [illegible] there is any doubt a "tap" is performed. This is accomplished by inserting a long needle through the lower part of the chest where the empyema is suspected. If empyema is present pus is obtained through the needle.

In more serious and advanced cases, a tap alone is not sufficient. In such cases an operation is necessary to remove the patient to a hospital where an operation is performed. In this operation a rib or portion of a rib, is removed and an incision, or opening made to allow the escape of accumulated pus. Never delay

Adams and Mrs. Therese H. Hills, motored down from Northampton last night and were driving back today . . .

Among others noted at the fashionable Bear was Mrs. Stephen Paine of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Constantine Belash of West Cedar st., who was the popular Janet Bartol before her marriage recently.

We are taking a deep breath now that we have planned the activities of the debutantes and of Princess Sweet Face and Molly O. for the season . . . Princess is struggling with shorthand and typewriting, Sweet Face is a neophyte in the stage and we know she will be a comedienne, and Molly is starting in with Dana Steveling at her studio on Otis pl. Beacon Hill, to learn the art of terpsichore . . . maybe we will take a course in tap dancing with Miss Steveling ourselves to try and lose a few lusty pounds which have crept upon us unawares this summer . . .

We are all of a dither over a certain Viennese who is coming to town soon . . . the stars in Hollywood are MAD about him . . . tell you more about him later!

'the social whirl'

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

SOCIETY HAS GONE BOVINE! Don't let that phrase puzzle you. It is simply that in these hard times the "growth of the soul" is being stressed. People begin to realize that perhaps one of our many difficulties leading up to the depression was that we had gotten too far away from the fundamentals of life.

Several prominent families who are interested in raising registered herds of Guernsey cows are meeting next Tuesday at a dispersal sale to be held at The Forges, Plymouth.

Mrs. Lawrence Grinnell

There will be a field day in the name of "Queen Cow," and many prominent families socially are bringing their registered stock to be shown and some sold on this occasion.

Prize Stock

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Ames will bring certain of their registered herd. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Grinnell of South Dartmouth will be represented. Hill Farm in New Bedford, the estate of the late William West, is sending some blooded animals.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitz Ingersol of Bay End Farm, Buzzards Bay, are showing their prize stock and planning to sell certain blooded animals.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Aldridge will be on hand with some of their finest prize winning stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, who it will be remembered took such vital interest in their own cows at the Topsfield Fair are among those interested.

Mr. Richard Saltonstall, who is greatly interested in cows, will be among the group, while Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gurnett are planning to offer some very fine cattle for sale from their farm in Kingston. Luncheon will be served for the guests by Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Whipple and a gay time of "The Farmer Frolic" variety will be in order. If you are looking for a bossy for the family, better drop in and see the fun.

Harvard Custom

CAN ANYONE INFORM US just what there is in the makeup of the average Harvard student that impels him to wear consistently grey flannel trousers and a brown sport coat? It seems to be an old Harvard custom. For years the classes have returned, but never without that amazing combination of grey and brown. Is it against the canons of polite Harvardian etiquette to wear a matched suit? We glimpsed among the throng so attired "Rob" Wigglesworth of Topsfield and Boston.

LANVIN LAME IN UNDER-COVER FROCKS -:- MILLION-DOLLAR SMILE RECOMMENDED

Plaid Wools Have Slipped Into Fashion Picture and Stolen the Show

(Authentic last minute fashions from New York—the style center of America)

By Victoria Gaines

WELL, NOW that we've bought our winter coats it's time to be thinking of the right frocks to wear under them. Frocks that are to be worn under cover aren't quite the same as frocks meant to be worn alone—the latter must be smooth and shapely soft around the shoulders and sleeves.

One of the new under-your-coat frocks for which great popularity is predicted is the number which is beginning to be known as the Lanvin Lame.

It's of simple black crepe with a silver lame yoke in a sort of cowl collar effect, and sleeve inserts of the same silver lame. And these silvery touches on the frock flatter the face and hands tremendously—probably the reason for its popularity. We've seen this model—and we think it's just one of those things you'll simply have to have this winter!

Drop Shoulderline

By the way, have you noticed the way in which daytime dresses are following the dropped shoulder line of the Lady Lou evening gowns? Not by hiding the shoulders, of course, but by introducing a light colored yoke that drops down over the shoulders to meet the dark material of the dress. These are quite charming and new-looking—besides bringing out the Mae West in us!

Fashion Picture

We think it's thrilling—the tricky things colors are doing this season! Particularly with eel-gray—that new taupe-like shade that gives Fashion such a grand opportunity to do different-looking color combinations. Coral-red and eel-gray, for example, or old gold and gray. And then the lovely green and gold combinations, and the russets and browns, and beetroot reds and browns.

It gives one a positively arty feeling, if you know what we mean, to play around with the color palette this way?

Plaid Paragraphs

Without any benefit of ballyhoo or build-up, the plaid frock has slipped quietly into the fashion picture and stolen the show. They're just simple, school-girlish sort of affairs—these plaid wool frocks— buttoned up the front in shirt-waist style, and finished off with white collars and cuffs— or at most, a dash of velvet scarf. The manufacturers reporting tremendous reorders on this type of dress—and the stores complain that they simply won't stay in stock—they sell so fast!

It's easy to see why they're "best sellers"—they're just the type of thing you practically live in all winter long—that you slip into and out of for dozens of different occasions.

The Mode of the Moment Shown by Well-Known Women

Miss Mary Pentecost is the third of the Pentecost girls to be featured in this series though by no means less fair than her sisters. She is wearing a magnificent gown of a lame that is composed of deep pansy blue with silver. Deep flounces are set into the sides of the skirt to give the interesting tunic line, which has become so popular this season.

Little Blouse That Boasts Big Leg-o'-Mutton Sleeves

By ANNICE BRINK

A RED, WHITE AND BLUE label announces that this delightful adjunct to the suit mode is a blouse designed in Paris by Marcel Rochas and reproduced in the U. S. A.

It is of a celanese fabric that has borrowed lustre from satin and stiffness from taffeta. It folds into a meek, flat little bundle, but you slip your hand inside the sleeve, push with the fingers, and out stands the genuine leg-o'-mutton sleeve. Before well for going under a suit jacket, doesn't it? With two movements you can poke up the sleeves and thereby look as though you had just arrived in a leisurely and roomy limousine or an open victoria instead of via the subway.

More than once you'll be thankful for the down-the-front opening. No disturbing of the freshly-combed wave, or lipstick stains around a tight neck; not to say much of the nerve-fraying ability of a blouse neck so narrow that you receive a slight gouging effect on the eyeballs and flattening of the nose when it's in transit, on or off.

Sleeves that reach to the elbow or just below it are no longer relegated to warmer seasons, but will be worn all winter. It's a good idea. Long sleeves have never been my pets—they soil before any other part of the wearing apparel, and it's easier to wash the arms than the cuffs, anyway.

The blouse is nicely fitted by means of seams starting from the bottom and petering out in the region of the chest, to help out the curve tendency. The very slim-waisted and those who are fond of having extra well-fitted waistlines will find it easy to add another seam or two.

The blouse shown is white, but both brown and navy are obtainable. The navy would be smart with an oxford grey suit, and brown is very much in the fashion picture if it is worn with any of the bright high shades of autumn.

We'll gladly tell you where the Rochas blouse may be purchased. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

For health's sweet sake, replenish the vital vitamin "C" in your daily diet. A large glass—full to the brim—of delicious golden orange juice is about the most welcome thing, next to sunshine, you can have in the morning. And if you like an added bit of "IT" in your "C" vitamins, add the juice of half a lemon to the orange juice. The orange juice itself is rich in this valuable vitamin, but the added lemon juice greatly increases its potency.

WE CONGRATULATE Captain Ernest Pentecost for the second time as we picture his daughter Mary who with her sisters Catharine and Cornelia, are to be presented to society this fa

Although Catharine and Cornelia are twins, it is Mary and Cornelia who look the most alike. All three are lovely—rich olive skin, dark eyes, dark hair, and delicate features. When we saw them the day the photographs were taken, they were all wearing sports clothes, crew neck sweaters that are so popular with the right people, and Balmacaan coats and felt hats.

This seems a popular uniform with society folk. They apparently like to step from sturdy sports attire into the exquisite things for evening. The contrast IS decidedly enjoyable. And the lovelier the evening gowns, the more delightful the change.

The gown being worn by Miss Mary Pentecost is in keeping with the season's high regard for glitter—gold, silver, sequins, diamonds. It is a metal cloth of silver and deep pansy blue woven in a wavy stripe.

Because of the magnificence of the fabric, the lines of the gown are kept as simple as possible, with the only break coming in the flounces that add interest to the sides. It is an ageless gown, becoming both to youth and to her elders.

Sporty Sports of Wooly Plaids

SPEAKING of sports clothes, and who isn't, there are some wild checks, stripes and plaids cavorting all over the place, in suits and frocks that have the tang of autumn about them.

One example is a development of the summer classic of shirt and skirt, done in a homespun woolen of small green and white checks.

Every Daughter of Eve Starts to Cultivate More and Brighter Smiles

By Therese Deschamps

HOW ARE YOU FIXED for smiles? Have you a good one? Or do your teeth need straightening? Don't let us discourage you in this matter of bigger and better smiles by dragging in the dentist immediately. That very important gentleman may be the one who will give you "your million-dollar expression."

We might go a bit poetess and say that pearly teeth are truly gems. Really the flash of white teeth from between rose petal lips is just one thing every daughter of Eve should have, cultivate and strive to obtain.

In this enlightened era, the intelligent use of toothbrushes, regular prophylactic treatments and other means of protecting the beauty and health of the teeth and gums—are all taken as a matter of course and followed meticulously.

Needed Daily

Most of us have even been convinced that mouth washes are a very necessary part of the daily toilet—and so we moderns have managed to struggle along very nicely without an abundance of false teeth.

Have you tried lemons in your bath? The juice of two or three lemons added to the water makes the soap lather to a beautiful foam, and is very cleansing. Lemons also have a gentle little way of whitening the skin if used with a fair amount of regularity.

* * *

Be careful when fooling with hang-nails. The flesh around the nails is especially sensitive to infection. If you have accumulated one or more of these bothersome affairs, soak the hands in warm soapsuds, dry carefully and apply a few drops of olive oil on the cuticle. Rub gently and then work up the shreds with an immaculate orange wood stick and snip away the offending ends with curved scissors.

Well trained cuticle should never be cut, or clipped, however.

Correct Corseting

If the heavyweight hasn't the will or the heart to reduce she should at least pay heed to the marvelous results that come from correct corseting.

Specially made or specially fitted stays will hold the curves in check. Large hips appear to lose inches when neatly bandaged.

And posture is also important to the plump lady. By drawing herself up full length, getting spring in her heels, bumps will flatten to a certain extent. At least, the lady of pounds will make a dignified, trimmer, smarter appearance.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Colors to Wear

Question: You have persuaded me to let my hair turn grey naturally. I have been struggling to keep it brown. What colors will I wear while it is mousey?—Mrs. T. L. O., Winchester.

Answer: Bravo! Personally, we are very enthusiastic about nature in its more natural form. Don't shudder at my suggestion that you try different shades of red while your hair is greying. That thought is not original with me, but has been successfully tried by other women. If your complexion is "florid"—then you will have to go in for greys, blue and black, with flashes of high color for relief.

Hair Rinse

Question: My little girl's hair is turning so dark. Is there anything I can use on it that will keep it light?—Mrs. T. R. E., Brighton.

Answer: There are rinses one can use on the hair to keep it light, but we do not recommend using anything on a child's hair but the purest soap and water, rinsing it thoroughly and giving the scalp gentle massage. Why try to keep a child's hair light? Nature is a swell person to let have her own way. The color of the child's eyes is probably changing with her hair.

Walk for Health

Question: I am only 24 years old, Miss Beechamps, and yet everybody thinks I am at least thirty. My neck is thin and I have more lines in my face than I should have. I work all day under artificial light. Does this account for my lack of color?—Miss D. L., Boston.

Answer: Working under artificial light is not the best beauty treatment I know—but you can counteract the effects of this by getting into the sun and air every chance you get. Is it possible for you to arrange your lunch hour so you can get good wholesome food with little effort and then walk at least a half hour every noon at a good brisk clip? Can you walk some distance on your way to work in the morning or in the evening? Don't worry too much about looking older now—you will probably look younger than most of your contemporaries when you are thirty.

Liquid Polish

Question: Can you give me the name of the maker of the new nail polish that is called Fire-Engine Red? I'd like to get some but can't seem to locate it.—Miss E. G., Malden.

Answer: We're mailing you the name of the maker of the newer colors of nail polish. This comes in Fire-Engine Red and as the name suggests, it comes into view with a bang. Oxblood and Diane Red. If one doesn't go for the deeper shades Rose Pearl is one that shines, but with a delicacy.

The Marry-Go-Round

Why Marriages Crash

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY IS IT THAT so many marriages today crash on a pebble before they even reach the rocks.

* * *

You never know how long a husband will last. Or how soon a wife will fade out of the picture. Or whether the honeymoon will outlive the coldness or even collapse before the train reaches Atlantis or Florida or the next station. It's all a gamble.

Helen Rowland

A husband used to be a Sure Thing. He was legally bound to love you for life—and he usually did. If he ceased to love you, he seldom found it out. He was too busy shaking down the furnace or pushing the perambulator or trying to pay the bills to discover that his wife no longer made his head swim.

But in those days nobody married "just for a thrill" or for an adventure. Astonishing as it may sound, a man married in order to get a WIFE—not in order to get a siren or a mistress. He didn't expect the romance or the thrills to last forever. He didn't think of himself as a Don Juan. And he didn't require the lady who was stirring the soup with one hand and rocking the cradle with the other to keep her marcelled and her fingernails carmined, or to play around with him at night clubs until the dawn came up.

Just why every girl should imagine that she was born to be a siren and a man charmer instead of a wife and a housekeeper is a deep, dark mystery.

But a much deeper and darker mystery is why every man, young or old, today should fancy that he was born to be a Casanova, a woman tamer and a heart breaker instead of a husband and provider.

—PANDORA TELLS YOU—

DEAR PANDORA . . .

For quite some time now there has been a bone of contention between my husband and myself as which there has been a great amount of spirited picking. You see . . . he is an ardent wrestling fan. He never misses a match, and although I loathe the sport he never allows that to interfere with his attendance in the slightest.

But that isn't the think I mind . . . far be it from me to hamper him in simple little amusements like that. What I object to is the reactions the bouts have on him. He doesn't come peacefully home, and tell me who won and why, in a reasonable tone. Not at all. He comes striding through the door with fire in his eye, and immediately proceeds to rehearse the whole bout . . . and altogether too realistically to suit me.

With a cheerful "what a headlock that was, Darling" he begins to crush my head . . . followed closely by a body twist that throws my sacro-iliac about three inches out of joint. Then with a delighted "and that scissors, Dear" he finishes the process by virtually bowing nether limbs.

Now this simply can't go on any longer. Either I shall soon be a mangled corpse, or deformed. We really are very much in love, and this is the only matter that causes me any discomfort, mentally or, as you may have guessed . . . physical. My pleas thus far have been useless . . . how can I persuade him to desist from this unconscious assault.

BATTLING (AND BATTERED) SUSIE.

DEAR BATTLING SUSIE—

I think the answer to your problem may be that you have unconsciously been . . . both literally and figuratively . . . at at the bottom of this whole matter. Perhaps, when you were first married, in your enthusiasm to please your husband and show an interest in the things he liked you were unwise enough to ask him what he meant by this or that technical term. That sort of thing naturally lead him on to believe that you really liked wrestling, and he was very eager to show you all the holds. In other words . . . you gave him the foothold for the ensuing toeholds.

As for the solution of the trouble, it is rather unfortunate that he pays no attention when you request him TO ease up a bit on the instructive assault. However . . . to really impress it strongly on his mind that this sort of wrestling practice actually does hurt you terribly, I think it would be advisable to approach the thing from this angle . . . "Darling . . . I don't mind the toeholds much, and a hairnelson or so doesn't bother me at all, but, one mind you . . . will mean divorce . . . and with a large alimony for cruelty."

By using these tactics, Susie, I really believe that in a short while you'll have down to the point where your only worry will be a little finger-twisting . . . the rest of the explanations will be merely verbal.

DOWLING MOVE SPLITS WATCH AND WARD

A move to unseat the Rev. Charles S. Bodwell, secretary of the Watch and Ward Society, and self-styled protector of the public morals, was seen today in a decision to act Monday on the resignation of John C. L. Dowling, president.

The Dowling resignation, handed in five days last June, will be accepted in a way that will open the way for charges against Mr. Bodwell, it was learned today.

As the only paid executive in the society, Mr. Bodwell has been secretary of many stormy scenes at private meetings of the organization and scores of times has been denounced by outside forces.

According to close followers of the organization's activities, Dowling will be asked by the directors to continue in the presidency and will, it is believed, continue until Mr. Bodwell is deposed.

The ultimatum is expected to be a controversial within the Watch and Ward ranks that many persons will seek the ousting of the secretary.

Mrs. Brandt-Erickson claimed she was permanently injured as a result of being forced to leap from a second-story window of The Ark during a fire Nov. 10, 1931.

The court ordered a non-suit entered in the claim of the husband for damages for the loss of the society and services of his wife.

"I feel strongly on those issues."

Concerning the convention [illegible] and for collection of the [illegible] debts owed by foreign powers, commander Hayes said:

"I am asking the nations that owe us to pay up."

The new commander began [illegible] ing plans for a colossal member[illegible]ship drive throughout the nation.

REV. F. B. WHITE CHOSEN

The Rev. Robert J. White of Watertown, Mass., was unanimously elected national chaplain. Rev. E. J. Graney of Euclid, O., and William P. Schultz of Detroit, who withdrawing after Fr. White apparently had received a large majority.

Five vice-commanders were elected unanimously. They are Cyrus E. Mabie of Salt Lake City, U. L. Gordon of Dermott, Ark., Miguel Munoz of Puerto Rico, Edward Smith of Herington, Kan., Charles J. Woolly of Providence, R. I.

For the third time the national convention adopted the program of the National Defense Council demanding that army, navy and air service strength be maintained.

Comdr. Hayes plans to go to Washington next week to confer with President Roosevelt.

The convention adopted the four-point rehabilitation program that conflicts with the President's viewpoint on free hospitalization for destitute ex-service men. The President holds the government is responsible for medical assistance to veterans whose ills were not incurred in active service.

HITLERISM DENOUNCED

"The four-point program for veterans' relief will be pushed to the utmost," Hayes declared. "Our first step is to acquaint every Legionnaire with the problems facing his organization that he may talk and think of the situation with definite knowledge.

"I believe our four point program and the mandates of this convention form a plan on which the government might well base its plans for the coming year. All we ask is that that President Roosevelt give us an opportunity to be heard. If we can present our program to him then we will be satisfied.

The Legion program adopted includes denunciation of Hitlerism and forceful opposition to Anti-Semitism, Fascism and Communism.

Put more SUNSHINE days on your calendar

How many days in the month do you feel your best? You can add to these sunshine days by simply obeying nature's laws.

The first of these laws is regular elimination. Avoid common constipation by eating a delicious cereal.

Tests show Kellogg's All-Bran furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to help aid regularity. All-Bran also contains twice the iron of an equal weight of beef liver.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much more pleasant than pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. Directions on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FENDERSON BATTLES MOVE TO INCREASE HIS BAIL

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

What interested me most in Einstein's London speech of a few days ago was not his remarks on peace, internationalism, and the Nazis—these are old stories now—but a couple of paragraphs on what the young thinker and scientist needs if he is to be really productive. The paragraph is worth quoting, as it expresses a point of view foreign to American thought:

"In this connection I should like to give expression to an idea which occurred to me recently. I lived in solitude in the country and noticed how the monotony of country life stimulates the creative mind. These new or fain ideas in our modern organization which mind such a isolated life without making a great claim on bodily or intellectual effort. I think of such occupations as the session at lighthouses and light-keeping. Would it not be possible to fill such places with young people who wish to think out scientific problems, especially of a mathematical or philosophical nature?"

I should like the opinion of a lighthouse keeper as to the amount of real leisure available after all the housekeeping is done and the lamp taken care of. A good deal depends, of course. Lamps are automatic, of course. The keeper sets up and keeps an eye on it. An admirable opportunity for a young scientist to get in 12 hours of concentrated work in the watches of the night. Lightships are less lonely, I imagine and noisier.

But what Einstein remarks on peace as the feeling more common in Europe than here: that peace is the concern of the people and the state for the good, every something to the scientist, and philosopher. Not only a living, but whatever will bring out the best in him. I read recently that the French Republic is supporting through the degree good artists as artists and intellectuals as intellectuals. Even England has its civil list for the recognition and support of artistic and intellectual merit in difficulties.

The conception is utterly foreign to us. About all our government does is to provide jobs in the Bureau of Standards and other scientific bureaus under ridiculous civil service rules invented for the purpose of getting reasonably competent stenographers and clerks, and paying a starvation wage. Stanislaw, that is on the theory that a man who has invested much time and money and effort on his education deserves greater return than one who has invested little. That is why it is so difficult to get first-rate young scientists to work for the government and why the department is constantly losing its trained and able men to private industry.

The idea of peace silence and isolation is I imagine, rather an idiosyncrasy than a rule. All thinkers do not need

Some work best in an uproar surrounded by busy people. Yet there is something to the idea. Many people find they work better after 11 o'clock at night when the world has quieted down and the electric vibrations of active man is in opposition no longer crowd the ether.

The young American scientist presumably has two choices. The good fortune of a young John Hays Hammond is seldom his. Incidentally, how much of the success of young Mr Hammond may be attributed to the fact that in addition to brains he has money to live on and purchase the best apparatus and assistance? Many a man with as good a brain never gets the money or the leisure to do his work.

The young scientist either goes into an industrial laboratory, where he does high pressure work in a group, or he teaches in a scientific school, where he does original work on the side, teaches for many classroom hours and for very little, and is always on call by his colleagues, the departmental organization, and the incessant, ubiquitous student. And yet the American is by nature a gregarious person, he loves his fellowman; he would be miserable if deprived from them.

Then too, Einstein ignores the fact that isolated thinking is possible in only a few sciences and only a part of the problem in others. Steinmetz in a canoe with a pad of paper on his knee and his log tables in his head is a rare bird. Science whether pure or applied, has probably profited more from the collaboration of kindred minds that fertilize one another than it has profited from isolated thinking. All science is by no means so abstract as absolute mathematics, Einstein's field. No one ever sat down in a closet and thought out the new mechanical integrator. There was long collaboration of several minds, plus a lot of practical tinkering.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that even of late years Europe's contributions to pure science compares favorably with ours—to put it mildly—in spite of our hordes of college graduates, our almost unlimited supplies of money, and the active encouragement of our great industries. It is not impossible that Einstein's notion of the lonely thinker needs to be taken more seriously.

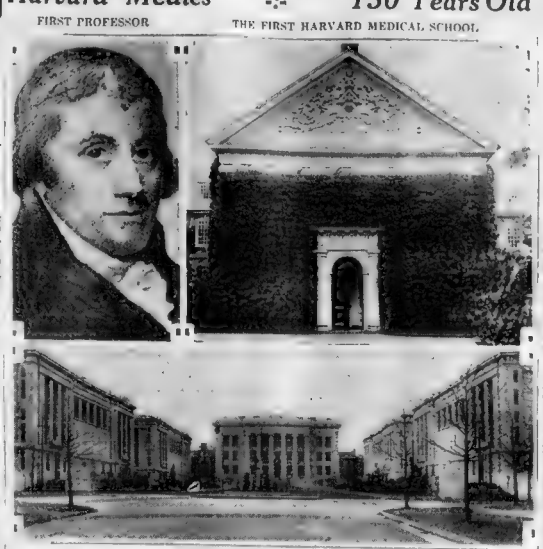
FIRST PROFESSOR — THE FIRST HARVARD MEDICAL SCHOOL



THE MEDICAL SCHOOL OF 1933

The 150th anniversary of the opening of the Harvard Medical School will be observed today and tomorrow. Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse, M. D., first Hersey professor of theory and practice, was the first professor of the school of medicine. It was at the Indian Chapel, in the Harvard Yard, in 1783, at Cambridge, that the first class in medicine studied. The school soon expanded to such a size that it required several new buildings to house the many students. Below is the present Harvard Medical School, located on the Fenway in Boston. A program of anniversary doings will be held both today and tomorrow.

Court Frees Debt Fugitive After 8-Year Search

Eight years ago Loren B. Gould, Jr., of Medford, was arraigned in Malden district court for stealing an auto. That was on May 9, 1925. He was ordered to make restitution for damage done to the auto on or before June 8 1925. When the day arrived neither Gould nor the restitution were forthcoming and a default warrant was issued.

Recently police picked Gould up and a check-up at headquarters revealed the default warrant still standing against him. He was turned over to Medford police, taken to the same district court, but the judge who imposed sentence has died, and Judge Enoridge G. Davis was on the bench. Capt. Charles H. Ewell told the court that police have failed to locate the person to whom restitution was due so that Lowell is powered to case he does not. The court approved the recommendation.

Gould, police say, has spent some of the time since 1925 in Concord reformatory.

HARVARD TO GET NEW SEAL

Harvard University may adopt a new seal as part of its tercentennial celebration in 1936, it was revealed today when President James Bryant Conant announced the appointment of a committee on seals, arms and diplomas.

It consists of Prof. Samuel E. Morrison, chairman; Dean Kenneth Murdock of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, and Charles A. Coolidge, architect of the new Houses.

Prof Morrison has already made researches that indicate that the university has used six different seals, the first of which was cut seven years before the college received its charter.

The present seal, with its motto of "Veritas" within argosy three books, is known as the Appleton design and was adopted in 1855.

Professor Morrison proposes to combine all the good features of the six seals in the new one at the same time eliminating features that have been found objectionable.

HILARITY AND MUSICAL NOVELTIES ON BILL

Former Screen Favorite Will Be Featured in Columbia's 'The House of Horror'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 6. June Collyer, the girl singled out by Prince George for his attentions when he visited Hollywood and the toast of the town before her marriage to Stuart Erwin, is returning to the screen. She signed with Columbia today, after an absence of two years from pictures, to play the lead in "The House of Horror."

The nice part is that June, who is happily married and the mother of a year old son, hasn't wanted to make a picture while her baby needed her. Now that Stu Jr. appears willing to share June is delighted to come back. Ralph Bellamy is the male interest opposite her and this thriller, which is a murder mystery tale will have Lambert Hillyer as director.

No picture of moderate cost in years has created as much talk as Monkey's Pretzels. Stanley Dreyer, who is handicapped by being the son-in-law of Carl Laemmle, produced it and myself because the hardest thing in the business is to be a successful relative. Roger Pryor who was discovered by Bebe made a test and signed for "Moonlight and Pretzels" will be the leading man in "I Like It That Way," a musical comedy written by Joseph Stanley Chandler Sperling and Harry Sauber. Put down the name of Harry Lachman as director.

Wynne Gibson as Star

Trains to the right of us trains to the left of us. And now comes Sol Wurtzel with another train idea. The Wurtzel number is Sleepers East, story by Frederick Nobel, a melodramatic train romance. Wynne Gibson has been signed for the featured role and there has been much "to do" over Mona Barrie an Australian girl, who was signed after a motion picture executive is supposed to have seen her on a bus. The bus episode sounds awfully fishy to us. Harvey Stephens, who did his best to get in pictures for a long time, is also in the cast. Kenneth MacKenna will direct and Lester Cole is writing the adaptation.

Ballyhoo Against

Lots of ballyhoo throughout the country over Columbia's picture, "Let's Fall in Love," another of those exact to coast searches for the right girl won't say Columbia had her all the time, but no one seemed to be surprised that Harriette Lake, musical comedy favorite was signed for the part. Seldom do amateurs run out of this so-called competition. Miss Lake (and she's not related to Arthur) followed Lois Moran in the road show of 'Of Thee I Sing.' Felix Young is in charge of production for Columbia. David Burton is the director and, just in case you have forgotten, Heather Angel had written the music. Lew Kahn arranged the details.

A Line or Two

Hollywood will get out its best bib and tucker to attend the huge industry luncheon given by Jack L. Warner, as chairman of the mayor's committee, honoring the naval affairs committees of the United States senate and House of Representatives. The ruffled feelings of the Hays' office have all been soothed. Paramount capitulated and changed Marlene Dietrich's picture, "Her Regiment of Lovers," to "Scarlet Pageant." Louise Dresser plays the empress. He just won't be the same if Charles Bickford remains in London for another picture. He is always having an argument or furnishing some good news. If I like him so much that the chances are he will stay on the other side to star in "Among the Pines." He visits Russia first.

Snapshots of Hollywood

An interesting romance is off to a good start between a doctor and a movie star. Dr. Hugh Cabot her physician, where except the people I see who have made operations BENITA HUME and her fiancé admirer JACK DUNFEE reported no nuptial bells ringing. LORETTA YOUNG and RUDY COLOMBO having fun at the Beverly Wilshire. TOLA LANE and SALLY EILERS built Egan the WALTER WANGER building a home in Europe as soon as he finishes the picture of Sylvia Sidney. ADELA ROGERS HYLAND on the choo choo, visiting New York before she settles down to write the life of Mae Murray. JANET GAYNOR has signed, after a six month holiday, to star in Paul HANS KRALY opens in a new Mexican hotel with a Hallowe'en party. KATHERINE HEPBURN in a sweet looking with King Vidor. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Reynolds brings to life Uncle Tom's Cabin' comes to the Colonial next week with Otis Skinner and Queenie Smith in the star roles; supported by a capable cast. Among the featured players are Elizabeth Risdon as Eliza and Roy LeMay as Harry. They are shown in a scene which is familiar to millions of playgoers.

Lewis Makes Everybody Happy

By HARRIS MORGAN

Hilarity on screen, emanating from another Zasu Pitts-Slim Summerville comedy and the able and unique Ted Lewis and his show on stage give the new bill at the RKO Keith Boston a gay entertainment range.

"Love, Honor and Oh Baby" is the title, and it proves to be in the main the Sam H. Harris play, "Oh Promise Me." You may recall how creamed raisins and spinach loomed notably for new meaning after that most laughable of all courtroom travesties wherein the unsuspected Miss Pitts is the plaintiff and the comic Mr. Summerville is her attorney.

The farcical twists of the plot are highly diverting. Donald Meek, former Boston stage favorite is the humorous chap who would commit perjury to win himself an ostrich farm. Lucile Gleason is the lady who uses opera glasses to spy on the private lives of her neighbors. Verree Teasdale is the tipsy almost bunco, and George Barbier the old Lothario who is made victim of a fake breach of promise suit.

The comedy is riotously told and the trial of the case is a gem of buffoonery. All the principals score, and Miss Teasdale's portrayal in her widow's weeds is something to laugh at and admire.

The audience in which this writer sat fairly howled with glee and more times the response seemed on the sparkling dialogue.

Mr. Lewis is a master showman, and on his own visit is as vital and resourceful as ever. The has added to the same old angle he sings as cleverly, and lends his inevitable hand as ably. Film Executives Predict New Stars to Bloom This Year

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

This new year will add triple glamour to Hollywood, so far as new faces in the films are concerned. That is the prediction of movie executives attending the last days sessions of the Mullin & Pinanski theater conferences at the Copley-Plaza.

Out of all the new faces that are to be added to the new output here are the three forecast as likely to join a Dietrich or a Garbo on the fan plate:

Kathryn Negava.
Dorothea Wieck.
Ida Lupino.

Charlie Enfield of Warner Bros. picked Miss Negava as a coming winner. He said she was a Russian girl tested at Hollywood and, after starring in about a new and different type, a girl with a personality. Her name, Enfield says, was Kathryn Negava. She is to be chosen to star in a film to be tried Tuesday.

Miss Wieck's agents were praised by Robert Gilbert, former Boston girl now a Paramount executive. She is one of those ladies, sometimes, how Norma Shearer and can be counted on to support a big film. It was her first. It was said of the Saga Star, star of "Maedchen in Uniform."

To Star Judith Allen

Miss Lupino of the famous Paramount acting family is the one who was imported to play Alice in the Carroll picture. She is to co-star Gilbert Roland in "Treasured Jean."

Lupino Lane and Bill Frisch were with Paramount Pictures when the Boston office brought out that picture. Fitzmont [illegible] was a musical [illegible] Grocery and [illegible] Paramount didn't [illegible] New York people, [illegible] the name he [illegible] "Just for fun's sake."

Charlotte Henry, finally chosen Alice of the Lewis Carroll picture, is to make an important tour ahead of the film "John Cabot Lodge of the Boston family is to play opposite Miss Dietrich in "Scarlet Parade," the new name for "Her Regiment of Lovers," which caused a stir in the Will Hays office.

Warner's' Plans

For Warners there were in addition to Enfield, Andrew Smith and Thomas B. Spry.

Enfield gave a candid outline of his contract with Warners, including an idea with plenty of wallop. He said Warners had had four new stars at their studios and were set for the biggest year of production in history of the company and he, the corporation which pays the bills, effects in the choosing of pictures.

One of the most interesting things he told was about James Cagney's next picture.

"This will be a startling theme one based on the true life story of a man who went to Hollywood on a 'shake down' venture, and became a star," said Enfield. "It is another ideal role for Cagney."

Started Him to Fame

Cagney did it by virtue of one bit of roughhousing," said Enfield.

He shoved a grapefruit full into Mae Clarke's face, and that was the 'shot' heard 'round the world. That started Cagney in his career to fame, and set the new style for scruff-of-the-neck stories and acting."

Enfield would throw no light on the character whose life is the basis for the next Cagney film. All he would say was "He is a star on another lot."

Film Saga of Homeless Children Pleases

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

Frankie "Wild Boys of the Road" impresses deeply despite certain weaknesses in the film. The film is presented on the new bill at the Paramount and Fox was lucky with a pair of "Lost Man's Harbors." The latter was the logical choice for what known as the "box office" the former has the virtues of better story and direction. Both are worthy of attendance.

"Wild Boys of the Road" is the story of the homeless children of America. Twelve thousand of them every year, so Mr. Zero, who's Postmaster Gen. BRISBANE CALLS U. S. TO FIGHT FOR NRA

New York, Oct. 6—Arthur Brisbane, noted editor, called on the nation last night to lend the same spirit of cooperation to the National Recovery Act as was given to the government during the World War.

At the request of Recovery administrator Hugh S. Johnson, he spoke over a nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting C

Brisbane defined the present economic situation as "an infinitely greater danger than confronted us when this nation was dragged into the war that concerned Europe and not us."

He suggested the remedy in these words:

"President Roosevelt constantly emphasizes the duty of the individual. If anyone asks, the answer is simple. If the question is, 'What can I do?' The reply is, 'Spend money now as liberally as you can; encourage business, promote the belief that hard times are here; enable employers to engage more men and pay more in wages.'

"Further, I want to distrust the thought that is as old as truth. That is that good can come from evil. From the days of depression and panic, it is reasonable to hope that there will come permanently what the human race deserves, shorter week; a shorter week day with better pay; increase in the worker and undiminished profit for those that deserve profit, with machinery doing most of the hard work.

The speaker asserted that war days brought on a period of recklessness in every direction, confidence in the impossible. In 1917, he said, millions of young men were told to fight and possibly die.

Emphasizing his theme of cooperation, Brisbane quoted a recent statement of Senator Capper, which said:

"I am not of President Roosevelt's political faith, but in a crisis like this he is entitled to the support of every American citizen.

"The test of a nation is in its cohesive power. Our recovery program is the most hopeful that any country is following. It is proving it will work. It has been well timed. Industry is increasing. Business is growing. Buy now. Help the work of recovery. You will be making an investment as well as a purchase."

The audience however, was in the performance hours, and appeared appreciative.

BOND BREAD VITAMINIZED

Many people have the idea that vitamin-D has always been a part of the natural nourishment in bread, and only recently has been discovered. The fact is, that vitamin-D must be present in appreciable amounts in any ingredients of which bread is made.

The discovery of [illegible] vitamin is credited to Dr. [illegible] Steenbock of the University of Wisconsin. And scientists [illegible] Pediatric Research Laboratory of Toronto perfected a method of applying that principle [illegible] bread.

FOODS ZESTFUL WITH BELL'S

Bell's Seasoning has found a place on the pantry shelves of housewives in nearly every city in the country for the past few years. I have met with no success, however, in finding a secret recipe of how that delicious meaty, savory flavor and many other [illegible] a zestful and piquancy of [illegible]

"It makes a real 'he' dinner, old man . . . close up and come on."

"If it's as good as the last one was, Bob . . . well, wait until I get my hat."

There's something about a real roast pork dinner . . . with apple sauce and plenty of green vegetables that "hits a man where he lives." Seldom do you find a man who doesn't relish roast pork, or pork chops.

But they are a bit particular . . . these men! They want it tender and full of that sweet, natural flavor found only in absolutely fresh pork. Should it be dry or tasteless, it just won't do!

Thousands of housewives buy only NEW ENGLAND DRESSED FRESH PORK, for they know it has a wonderful flavor all its own. It's far different from just fresh pork . . . far more flavor and far more tender.

Mr. Dennis Shea | The Redskins,
Lets You Have | His Pride and Joy,
Both Barrels | Are in Town

By DAVID F. EGAN

(Swatting for Austen Lake, the Sick Sissy)

"A professional football player," said Mr. Dennie Shea, manager of the Redskins, as he settled himself judiciously in an office chair, "can't afford to have gristle or suet between his ears."

Mr. Shea had just arrived home, somewhat breathlessly from his voyage with the Boston Redskins. It was all strange territory for him, because his hands had been plunged deeply in the show business as an agile publicity man, and when said show business went ker-blooey, Mr. Shea went football.

"We don't want gristle and suet between the ears," he said as he puffed on a pipe which is known as the most noxious between Boston and Biscayne Bay. "We want bone and brains, and we have 'em, Dave; we have 'em. We have a heluva team." That, at least, is the way it sounded.

"There was a fellow," he continued, as the blue-gray smoke curled around his priestly head, "who came from a small college in Oklahoma and asked for a try-out. He could throw a forward pass better than anybody I ever saw, and that includes Wally Herber of the Green Bay Packers and Harry Newman of the New York Giants."

"The New York Giants," and he added this in a suspiciously significant manner, "will play the Boston Redskins at Fenway Park next Sunday afternoon, hot or cold, rain or shine, yes or no, at unusually modest prices of admission, in a game which is rougher than a wrestler on a toot, in a sport which shows the acme of technique, in a——"

Couldn't We Have a Little Air in Here?

"What were you saying?" asked the old Colonel, as gray and cold as the ice on a winter pond. "You were talking about some clover kicker from Oklahoma when you went into your difficult clog-step. Now I do not wish to interrupt," said I, "but I am all agog and entirely atwitter about this young man from Oklahoma who could throw better passes than Herber or Newman. Was he a frail little fellow who could not stand the grind?"

"A frail little fellow?" he asked, as the smoke spurted out of the pipe in a furious puff, and sobs hopped nimbly out of their steam-heated grave to smudge his travel-worn trousers. "Why, he was as strong as a young Andalusian bull."

(Ed. note: Mr. Egan took his hair down and cried when confronted with the evidence that he does not know how strong is an Andalusian bull. When asked, he replied in a sobby voice, "I am not good at riddles, unless they are riddle cakes.")

"So," said I, in a sibilant whisper, "what was the matter? Did he have athletes' foot? Pink tooth-brush? Bad breath? Slappy pistons or floating rear axle? Or maybe he couldn't mend umbrellas?"

"None of those things," replied Mr. Shea, as a tear crept into his voice and trickled truculently down his face. "None of those things. HE HAD GRISTLE BETWEEN THE EARS! I repeat sir, HE HAD GRISTLE BETWEEN, OR PERHAPS I SHOULD SAY AMONG, THE EARS!"

The Clover Kicker Couldn't Take It

The plays, it developed, were so involved and intricate that the clover kicker from Oklahoma was always in the way, and so was given the well-known air after Coach Lone Star Dietz, who talks like a punch-broken fighter and bears a curious resemblance to J. Hambone Kelley, had snorted at him a half-dozen times.

And I suppose that the plays which will be paraded publicly in Boston for the first time next Sunday afternoon will befuddle us boys and gals, for it is said that Mr. Lone Star Dietz, of a German father and a Sioux Indian mother, owns and operates the finest football brains in the world.

Dick Hanley, coach of Northwestern, was a pupil of Dietz, and he tried to improve on the principles of his master, with interest, music, and accompaniment. The Redskins trained at Northwestern, and Hanley was inclined to leer here and sneer there and he was here to make disparaging and pointed remarks.

The stoical Lone Star took it all in fairly good grace. He is quite a fellow. And when Iowa beat Dick Hanley's team in the opening game of the conference season last Saturday, Dietz explained, quietly and patiently, exactly where and how Hanley had been wrong. Now Northwestern is back on a Dietz diet, strictly.

Pop Warner, now of Temple; Andy Kerr of Colgate, and Dick Hanley of Northwestern, have gained universal recognition among the college folks as the leading exponent of the double wing-back system. They tell me that Lone Star Dietz will show them tricks which they have never even suspected.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Dennie Shea has defied your hawk-eyed commentator to announce the name of the ball-carrier five out of 10 times when the Redskins make their debut. "We have spinners and half-spinners and cross bucks," he said comfortably. "We also have laterals, and forward passes developing on the tail end laterals. We have the greatest assortment of plays that Boston has ever seen."

"And so," he said as he sucked greedily at the gorblimey pipe, "the players can't have gristle between their ears."

Boston College Freshmen Face Dean Academy

The Boston College freshman team opens its belated season this afternoon at University Heights with the Dean Academy eleven. Coach Dan Sullivan of the Dean outfit, is the possessor of a Boston Latin star of last year, Frank Ryan. Ryan was a fullback at the Louis Pasteur Avenue institution but has been moved into the forward wall.

Bill Boehner, the mentor of the Eaglets, will center his attack around the abilities of Bill McCarthy, the quarterback. McCarthy is an old English High hand and is rated about the best ball toter on the frosh eleven.

The first year lads are favored to win by virtue of their long thankless sessions with their older brothers of the varsity.

'Jack Rabbit' Ball Has Giants Bewildered

By FRANK G. MENKE
Universal Service Correspondent

Griffith Stadium, Washington, Oct. 6—The Senators hauled Earl Whitehill out of hiding, jerked ol' "Br'er Jack Rabbit" from his coop, sliced the combination upon the Giants and blasted the Giants' "four-in-a-row" ambitions.

"Br'er" is the fastest travelling baseball in all the world. When earnestly caressed he travels at a speed between 5 and 85 miles an hour, which was something the Giants didn't know until after the first inning and then it was far, far too late to do them any good whatsoever.

CHILL RECEPTION

With President Roosevelt and 25,000 other persons, all of them chilled to marrow by the wh pping breeze, gnaing at them, the Giants were formally introduced to "Br'er Jack Rabbit," of the American League, in the inaugural inning and their mortification, mystification and embarrassment was reduced to Giant rooters only.

Myer opened proceedings for the home town boys by smacking "Br'er" in a vital spot and "Br'er" was whistling through the leftside of the infield. Travis Jackson, accustomed only to the National League snail, started toward the ball, a La National League infielding and before he could blink an eye "Br'er" was in left field, and Myer was on first.

Goslin followed and nearly knocked down the right field wall with an almost lazy swing at "Br'er." It counted for two bases. Soon thereafter Schulte came along and sent "Br'er" racing just inside the right-field foul line and almost at Bill Terry—almost but not quite.

Bill figured that he merely needed to take a hop-skip and a short jump and "Br'er" was his to have and to hold

TERRY TOO LATE

Bill took the hop, but before he could start his skip, "Br'er Jack Rabbit" was way out there in right field with Mel Ott in full pursuit which pursuit ended only after Schulte had reached second in safety.

The two runs the Senators tallied in the first were enough to win two ball games, such as was sung by Earl Whitehill on this particular afternoon. But just to make victory most emphatic, the Senators added another in the second and chalked up the final in the seventh.

Whitehill didn't try to throw the baseball past the Giants. He let them smack "Br'er" around, having faith in his mates and their knowledge of "Br'er" and his whizzing ways. The Senatorial infield, knowing the ball, was in motion with the crack of the bludgeon and "Br'er" didn't do any scampering through them.

IN TROUBLE ONCE

Whitehill was in trouble once in the eighth. Two on bases two out, Terry up. Terry popped to Sewell in front of the plate. That's that story.

The portly Fred Fitzsimmons and his knuckle ball brought nothing but joy and delight to the Senators. They belted Fitz safely in five of the eight innings they faced him, and when they weren't driving into the hit column they rammed balls so hard at the infielders that the Giants tonight will need about $150 worth of liniment for wrenched backs.

"It'll be Carl Hubbell today and that will be a different story," said Terry, after the ramble. "We can't win 'em all as we had hoped, but with Hubbell and Schumacher to shoot back at them, I guess we can grab the next two, even if we do have to wrestle around with that lively ball."

Joe Cronin, Senators' chieftain, was all smiles for the first time.

"Just got going," he beamed. "We'll even it up today, Hubbell or no Hubbell. The first time we met that fellow we thought all he was doing was waving a left arm. Later we learned that he was throwing a baseball. Now that we know that he's a thrower and not a waver, we'll begin to hit what he throws."

Giants on Long End of Betting

New York, Oct. 6 — Because Carl Hubbell is expected to return to the Giants' mound today, Broadway betting commissioners made the New York Giants favorites to take the fourth game of the World Series.

Jack Doyle, veteran commissioner, quotes 6 to 5 against the Giants and even money against the Senators for today's throne. The Giants remained favorites for the series, Doyle quoting 7 to 10 against them and 11 to 10 against Washington. He quoted 2½ to 1 against either club taking the next two games and 5 to 1 against the Senators taking the next three in a row.

How Nats Scored Runs to Beat the Giants

Washington, Oct. 6—Here is how Washington made its four runs to win in the third game of the series:

First Inning—Myer singled and Goslin doubled, sending Myer to third. Myer scored on Cronin's infield out. Fitzsimmons to Terry. Goslin to ing to third. Goslin scored on Schulte's single. Two runs.

Second Inning—Bluege doubled. He went to third on Sewell's infield out. Whitehill was safe on a fielder's choice. Myer singled, scoring Bluege. One run.

Seventh Inning—Sewell singled and stole second. He went to third on Whitehill's infield out and scored on Myer's single. One run.

A world championship stake rides on that good left arm of Carl Hubbell, baffling Giants' "screw ball" artist who faces the Senators in the fourth game of the World Series at Griffith's Stadium, Washington, today.

Cunningham Goes in Iramerk Bout

Walter Cunningham, Roxbury 160-pounder, has entered the Irish American A. C. amateur boxing tourney, to be held next Monday night at the new Broadway clubhouse in South Boston.

Cunningham has won 24 victories in 25 bouts and is the outstanding entry in the middleweight division.

Third Day Crowd Far Below Peak

Washington, Oct. 6—A crowd of 25,727, far below capacity, was officially counted in the third game of the World Series between the Giants and the Senators.

Total receipts were $135,415. The capacity of the stadium with its extra series seats is 36,000.

The advisory council will receive $17,013 of the day's receipts, the players $57,841 and the leagues and clubs $58,561.

Washingtons Like Home Cooking

—BY ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

(Copyright 1933, by Universal Service Inc)

Washington, Oct. 6—The shoe was on the other foot here.

And the foot was in the water bucket.

Clark Griffith selected the pitcher. First he looked up Whitehill's sleeve to make sure there was an arm in it.

There was an arm in it, Clark said, "Whitey, you pitch. Stand them on their heads and make it tough for the news reels."

Whitey was good. The Giants got as much nutrition as an Arab chewing a door mat in the Sahara.

If Whitey was throwing a lively ball the Giants will have to take his word for it. They didn't make it bounce any.

The hero was Buddy Myer the Washington three-threat man. He can run, pass and boot.

In New York he boots. In Washington he earns his salary.

He autographed most of the balls Fitzsimmons threw at him.

He got three smacks and fielded his position like one of Roxy's ushers on roller skates.

The day was cloudy and it rained. The fans who didn't show up will be there today with notes from their mothers.

President Roosevelt played the full derby route. He got a good laugh when Mancuso threw to first to catch a runner napping. Only Terry was napping. The ball hit him on the chest and rolled into right field. Mancuso doesn't care so long as he catches somebody napping.

The press box is on the roof of the grandstand. The reporters looked like a lot of trapped pigeons.

ODDS DROP SHARPLY AS SENATORS SURGE

be more effective, the longer he rested.

RISKS ALL ON VICTORY

If Bill told the truth he would no doubt admit that he is risking losing everything in an effort to inflict a crushing defeat on the Cronin clan.

You may question his judgment, but you must admire his daring. A guy who ill take such a long chance sure deserves the sunshine and roses that will be his, if his gamble succeeds.

Will it succeed?

There should be a packed house today. We have said that for three days now and the crowds have grown 10,000 greater daily, but the prediction for today tastes like the real McCoy.

SWITCH IN BETTING

The Senators have a victory and have shown some of the class that carried them to the pennant, fair weather is promised and Hubbell, who has never pitched in this city, is going to work.

If there aren't 40,000 present today Judge Landis had better start seriously considering reducing the price for viewing double-headers till he can be seen.

The extent to which the hopes of Washington followers have soared as a result of the Senators' shutout victory is reflected in the latest betting prices.

Your observer still feels the New Yorkers have a big edge and can't see why the Cronin clan should be quoted any higher than they are being. The fact that no club in World Series history ever won but after losing the first two games gives the National Leaguers a 28 to 1 edge.

The Senators gave a most finished exhibition to chalk up their shutout here. President Roosevelt who chased the rain to attend and was rewarded with sunshine from the time he entered the park until he left a few minutes after the finish, happy but a bit tired from cheering for Griffmen, as I applauding every time they.

In fact the American Leaguers looked far more impressive than did the Giants in either of the triumphs the latter chalked up at the Polo Grounds.

For that matter, the Giants looked better here than they did winning the first two. It was that kind of contest.

There was good pitching, sharp, timely hitting and fielding gem galore.

WHITEHILL GREAT

Whitehill made the previous pitching efforts of Hubbell and Schumacher look cheap in comparison. The Giants' aces pitched five-hit games with a dead ball and were each scored on. The local southpaw turned in a five-hit performance with a TNT agate and decorated the enemy with nine large horse collars.

It is easy to see how Lefty Earl had compiled the highest winning percentage in the American League during the season.

The diminutive portsider took command in the very first frame by setting the Tycoon down in order with a mixture of fast curves, puzzling cross-fire and tantalizing floaters and never showed the slightest sign of faltering the rest of the way.

He concentrated, wisely, on stopping Bill Terry and Mel Ott. How well he succeeded can be judged from the fact that neither of the Giants' sluggers knocked the ball out of the infield during the afternoon.

MYER SENATOR ACE

He couldn't miss clear sailing when he avoided those roots. No New Yorker found him for more than one hit and only three saw third base.

He was forced to bear down only twice. He got Terry in each instance, on an easy grounder with runners on first and second in the second, and on a pop to the catcher with men on first and second in the eighth.

Fred Fitzsimmons, Giants' veteran knuckle ball artist, wasn't that bad. He can blame his downfall on his inability to stop Buddy Myer and the failure of his mates to score.

Myer made everybody forget all about his three errors in the opener by his slugging against Fat Freddie. He hashed out a double and two singles, scored a run and knocked in three others.

The other Nats' tally registered in the first, Goslin counting on a single by Schulte.

The victors threatened on several other occasions but thanks to fine pitching and fielding by a respectable showing until he was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

MOORE CUTS OFF RUN

Moore cut off a run with a perfect peg to the plate, which doubled up Whitehill trying to score on Goslin's fly to left in the second. Critz took a bit away from Kuhel, with a runner on, by a story-book back-handed stab over second, the best play of the series to date. Ryan and Jackson did yeoman service.

UPSETS LOOM AS COLLEGE FOOTBALL HITS FULL STRIDE

CATHOLIC UNIV. PICKED OVER HOLY CROSS

By BILL GRIMES

After a fortnight of light skirmishes, football will be officially opened tomorrow, when the last of the late starters get underway.

Already there has been numerous upsets in the college football arena and, in all probability, some of the more highly touted elevens will be left at the post tomorrow. In fact, the stage is set for some real killing, such as a Catholic U. St. Mary's victory over California and "Pop" Warner celebrating his return to the East with a Temple win over Howard Harpster's Carnegie Tech.

The Big Three of the East will break away from the barrier tomorrow afternoon. Harvard tackling Bates, Yale playing Maine and Princeton with Amherst.

The Crimson, Blue, and Orange and Black have too much man power for their opponents and all should win by creditable margins.

ROMP FOR EAGLES

The Boston College-Loyola tilt should prove a romp for the Eagles.

Down at Annapolis, Navy will have an opportunity to make a comparison of its strength with that of West Point for the Middies will take on Mercer, who gave the Kadets a scare last week.

Lou Mancy and his Jumbos are packed up for a trip to Waterville to play Eddie Roundy's Colby eleven, and Northeastern will break into varsity competition at Brookline with St. Anselm's, which will prove a tough opponent for the Huskies.

There are no less than four games in New York, Muhlenberg at Fordham, Columbia and Lehigh, Manhattan and Gettysburg and N. Y. U. and West Virginia-Wesleyan, and all of the big town aggregations should win under wraps.

In all probability, the best attraction in the East is right up in Worcester, where Holy Cross will clash with Catholic University. The Crusaders have the call over the Washingtonians who are, however, coming up in the world and might crash through, for Coach Art Bergman has a powerful and experienced squad while Holy Cross is developing a new system.

Dartmouth has another setup in Vermont and will do some more experimenting, but Coach Tuss McLaughry will shoot the works against Frank Keaney's Rhode Island State.

TERRIERS SHOULD CLICK

Through the expulsion of player control, Boston University should make a more creditable showing against the University of New Hampshire than it did with Middlebury. Neither team has hit its peak, and will be further handicaped through the absence of their captains, who are on the injured list.

Coach Charlie Caldwell is confident that his Williams outfit will take Middlebury.

Mass State and Bowdoin open their seasons at Amherst.

COAST ATTRACTIONS

From here it looks as though Harry Stuhldreher will take another beating from South Carolina.

Georgia Tech will engage Kentucky in a feature attraction at Lexington and as Harry Gamage's boys were tied at Sewanee a week ago, Bill Alexander should chalk up his second victory of the season.

There are three great games listed for the Pacific Coast, U. S. C. vs. Washington State at Los Angeles, Cal., and St. Mary's vs. Berkeley and Stanford and Santa Clara at Palo Alto.

Polar Bears Set for Yale Encounter

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 6.—In perfect physical condition, the Maine football squad arrived here for a Saturday date with the Eli Bulldogs.

The Bears are stacking up against more than they can handle but Coach Fred Brice believes that if spared injuries the green line will learn invaluable lessons in its trial against Yale.

The lone chance in the Maine camp during the past week was shifting of Ted Butler to quarterback in the place of the veteran Don Favor who will play right halfback.

Bruins Want Game

The East Boston Bruins are looking for a game for Oct. 8, preferable at home, with any fast semi-pro eleven in the state. Manager Andy Tracy may be reached at East Boston 3676 between 6 and 8 p. m.

Roxbury Gives -:- -:- Morey Tackle

Arthur Gilman, now a raging big tackle on Dave Morey's Bates eleven, used to be the mainstay in the Red and Black line for Dorchester high. The Roxbury boy will be in action when Bates opens the Harvard season at the Stadium, tomorrow.

BATES ALL SET FOR HARVARD

While Eddie Casey leaned back today with the questionable satisfaction of having made the best of a none too promising situation his friend and rival Dave Morey mentor of the lillie Bates outfit was supremely confident that his boys would prove the masters in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

None of Morey's confidence was expressed in words. For Morey doesn't do a great deal of talking. But his actions fairly oozed with belief in the qualities of the lads who will carry Bates' colors against the Crimson.

A pet of all Morey was so sure of his men and their ability to take care of themselves, that he left Lewiston a whole day ahead of schedule and arrived in Boston under cover of darkness last night. He checked in at the Lenox Hotel early in the evening. When the squad proper thundered in this wake early today in a small fleet of buses, Morey calmly informed the players that they could have the rest of the day to themselves.

Cleveland Seeks Brown, Sox Ace

Washington, Oct. 6.—Cleveland is bidding for Lloyd Brown, Red Sox southpaw, by trade or purchase. So far they have not been able to close the deal, General Manager Billy Evans of Cleveland admitted.

"We are in the market for a southpaw and would like to get Brown, but that's as far as matters have gone," said Evans. "I hope to settle the deal in a day or two."

Evans said Cleveland would not bid Johnny Burnett go in connection with the proposed deal, but had talked of trading Chalmers Cissell, veteran second baseman, for Brown.

125 State Frosh Report to Taube

Amherst Oct. 6 Massachusetts State freshman football candidates 125 strong, reported to Coach Mal Taube for their first practice.

Following out the custom of the last few seasons, no outside schedule will be played. Several varsity players will be called by Coach Taube to assist in coaching this record group.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

LOU BROUILLARD has backed down and will defend his title as world's middleweight champion against Vince Dundee at the Boston Garden on October 23. The official announcement will not be made for a few days, but you can write it in your note book that the title skirmish is signed, sealed and delivered.

There is a double contract which will give Brouillard a return engagement in New York in the event he loses the duke here. Lou didn't want to go through with the Dundee bout after the latter was severely cut by Ted Lady Yarosz, but was persuaded to change his mind.

There was talk of a Rosenbloom-Schmeling bout, but this affair will have to wait both after the middleweight championship battle.

Mr. Boston

Max Waxman, local Broadway character, tried to get through with the Dundee bout. He was paved to do a Daniel Webster contracts after the boxing commissioner Willard fell through. Morey Lindsay did the Johnny Risko act to perfection.

Of course, Waxman will deny this story, but I'm willing to gamble on the match.

Carnera Against Paulino

JIMMY JOHNSTON, master mind of boxing at the New York Garden, pulled the strings which gained for Primo Carnera permission to meet Paulino in Rome. Brother Charley, who manages the Basque, is on the high seas bound for Rome. Primo is also on his way to the scene of the battle.

It is expected that 100,000 people will see Primo defend his title. It will be the greatest sporting event in the history of Italy. Paulino is on the way out as a first class fighter, and should be a prize easy picking for the champion.

Baer to Meet Carnera

UNDERSTAND plans have been completed for a title bout between Carnera and Max Baer. Jack Dempsey will be in the picture as one of the promoters. Dempsey has Baer under contract, while Carnera is tied up with the Garden. The latter is prepared to give Louis a part of the profits of the attraction to stage the match.

Meanwhile Jess Levinsky is demanding a Carnera bout for the Garden, on the event the Carnera-Paulino match materializes. Levinsky has got a crack at Carnera. Of course he will have to wait his turn. He'd like to make it soon. He has been the victim of inactivity because he advertised Tuffy Griffiths as a bout.

Twi Title Final at Dilboy Field

The Suburban Twi-Light League championship and the city prize title of Somerville will be at stake in the doubleheader to be staged by National Stores and Hi-A Stars at Dilboy Field on Sunday afternoon, the game starting at 1:30.

First Nationals, who have won two games played, will be going after competition and Lefty [illegible] will pitch for First National. Peeler, who also [illegible] Club with two hits, and Frank Davies, former [illegible] all-scholastic pitcher, will work for Hi-A's.

Nats Invited to Train on Coast

Pasadena, Cal., Oct. 6.—The Senators have been invited to do their spring training in 1934 at Tournament Park, Pasadena, where the Chicago White Sox had a training camp last spring.

Manager Leo Fonseca will bring the Chisox here again next spring. Because Fonseca and Manager Joe Cronin of the Senators are close friends, Pasadena officials extended the invitation to Washington in the hope the Solons will come here also. Washington trained last spring in Mississippi.

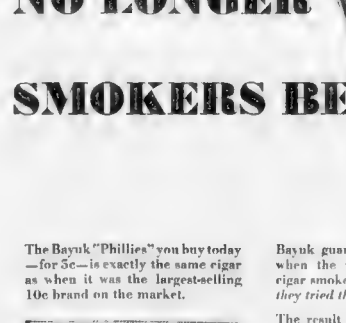
NO LONGER NEED CIGAR SMOKERS BE SKEPTICAL

The Bayuk "Phillies" you buy today—for 5c—is exactly the same cigar as when it was the largest-selling 10c brand on the market.



Bayuk guaranteed this in January when the price was reduced. But cigar smokers were skeptical—until they tried the cigar.

The result speaks for itself. Bayuk "Phillies" today—at 5c—is the largest-selling cigar in America at any price. More than a million and a quarter Bayuk "Phillies" leave the plant every day—and the demand still exceeds production.

This simply means that smokers—skeptical or otherwise—have convinced themselves that Bayuk "Phillies" is the best cigar value they can buy.

If you are not entirely satisfied with the cigar you now smoke—try at least one Bayuk "Phillies". Your Dealer will tell you that it is pleasing the tastes of more men than any cigar ever displayed on his counter.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

M'KENNEY COUNTS ON B. C. SUBS TO BEAT LOYOLA AT HEIGHTS

Brunos Set to Test Friars

Brown University's football squad girded itself today for the opening clash of a lengthy and difficult schedule. Rhode Island State College will furnish the opposition tomorrow at the stadium, apparently stronger than at any time in a score of years.

Four sophomore backs will make their varsity debut in the game, according to Tad Wieman, Bruno coach, who announced his lineup last night. This second group comprises the largest number of sophomores ever to start a season on a Bruin team under Mr. Laughry.

Harris Hart, a 190-pounder already end wise, remains to start at the other end of the line over Tom Cullen, a veteran tackle on the other wing. Hart replaces Mal Ball, Maine transfer, by left for Hollywood to seek fame and fortune.

Gus Olsen, a 200-pound tackle from Dean Academy whose talking has been little short of spectacular, will have Larry Brown as a running mate on the tackles. "Cap" Capasso, ineligible last season, has regained his right guard berth and will have the sophomore, Ted Etchings, from Malden, pulling out of the line with him on the wing back plays.

Dan Fraad, who was counted upon to handle the snappers back post, is ill in the hospital with a badly infected leg and may be lost to the squad for the rest of the year. Fraad's illness comes at a time when the center position is badly in need of reserve strength and leaves Dick Reardon as the only man eligible who has previously played.

Three veterans and a newcomer, Dave Hart, will start in the back field. Captain Joe Pannanno, a brilliant quarterback, will call the signals. Hart, an Exeter star three seasons ago, will take over Eddie Gilmartin's left halfback berth pairing with Henry Allen

TO SAVE STARS FOR CENTRE ENCOUNTER

By WALTER KILEY

Substitutes will play an important part in the Boston College game of that is against the Loyola College of Baltimore at Lower Heights tomorrow afternoon. When the Eagles will start their strongest lineup, Coach McKenney will assert his reserves as soon as the outcome is fairly certain in favor of Boston College.

His purpose is two fold. First he is anxious to give his second and third string backs an opportunity to break in competition time in order to give them the more important practice of the latter sort. And secondly he is desirous of saving his regulars as far as possible for the big game with the Praying Colonels of Centre College on October 12, only five days later.

LOYOLA MYSTERY TEAM

Comerford, like McKenney is a Maj. Cavenaugh-coached product. He played end on some of the best Eagles' teams in history, being named captain on the 1923 team. He graduated from the Heights in the summer of the same season that McKenney entered, one starting in where the other left off.

The Eagles have been warned all week of over confidence. Coaches Mike Ahern and Pepper-Rox Orma are using the case of last year when the Orse put on a brave display of defensive tactics for three full periods, finally weakening only under the pressure of Fran Eagles' reg a cuards, but there's no guess sears into the home team in the meanwhile.

Manager Harlow of Loyola tells us that Comerford has a very light backfield as compared with the senior quartet which was lost through graduation.

MAN HEAVY LINE

He has a line experienced and veteran men, experts, favorites with lots of reserves.

When Loyola takes the field tomorrow the ends will be Walter Dunn 172, and Joseph Miraglia 168; tackles George Waidner, 200, Al Marvland tackle last year, and Anthony F. Novak 185; guards Bernard Hoffman 265, and Joseph Mura, 190 and center, Bruce Burger 175.

Edward Lerner 150 is quarterback Chris Kirpatrick 150 and Charles Bonner 150 halfback and A. L. Hoffman, 165, fullback.

TONE AT WING

Thomas Todd and Joe Kelley will be starting ends for Boston College like Dunnett and Reilly Brennan Gilbert 180 and Dave Kelly, the 200 lb. tackles will be in the center.

Johnny Clarke, Capt. Frank Mahoney, Jim Curran and Tom Brennan will start in the backfield in all but head coach Gene Wilson's Tom Clarke Ed Kelley Jake Dineen Ralph Berry Jiggs Lee Bob Bolo, Ot Johnny Deegan among others who will undoubtedly see action.

Lou Mason who has been bothered with a bad knee will be rated as possible for the pass duties against Centre as will Ted Galligan tackle who has been nursing an infected leg.

Watch Our Smoke From Now On --Bluege

By OSSIE BLUEGE
Washington First Baseman

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, Oct 6—We have reached the turning point. Back home in our home park we showed the Giants just what a Washington offensive clicking at its best, can do behind the five-hit pitching of Earl Whitehill.

I make no predictions as to the length of the series, but whether it goes six or seven games the outcome will be the same—the Nationals on top.

There is a renewed confidence in the ranks of our men following today's 4-0 victory over Bill Terry's men.

The nervousness so apparent among the Nats in the first two games at the Polo Grounds was missing today. Playing before the President Cochran we treated as a Washington fan and 30,000 well wishers, we felt more at ease in the third game.

The tension under which we were playing was gone; we felt as though we were meeting New York with only one outcome possible—that of a Washington victory at the end of the ninth inning.

Whitehill? I can't praise him enough. He was great. His performance can easily be compared with that of Carl Hubbell's five-hit feat in the first game of the series. I suspect the Giants will see more of Earl before the series is over.

Critz Puts the Bee -:- On Nats Freddy Schulte

It's a long way between bases, Freddy Schulte of the Senators discovered in the third series game. The distance from second to third was too long for Freddy. Hughie Critz, Giants' second sacker, puts that fast American League ball on Freddy for the put out. Play occurred in the first inning. That's Blondy Ryan, our Lynn citizen, in the background.

Grimm to Ride in Garden Race

Bill Grimm, winner of New York, Philadelphia and Chicago marathon contests, will make a strong bid for top honors in the six-day bike race, which starts at the Boston Garden, Oct 16.

Exeter Grid Host to Yale Freshmen

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 6—Exeter will probably oppose the Yale freshmen tomorrow with the same line-up which started the New Hampshire game last week.

Tech Soccerites Face Yale Varsity

Teacher Cracks Rib Instructing Class

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 6 (US)—Doctor Lloyd Shaw, superintendant of Cheyenne high school here, received a cracked rib when giving instructions in bulldogging steers to his class in that study.

FITTONS FACE LAURIERS AT LOWELL

The Fitton eleven tasks to Lowell Sunday where it will help the Laurier Club grid stars dedicate their new park in Lowell when the home team will play a few games this season.

In other years this organization has always been forced to play outside of Lowell but this year the enthusiasm of the Lowell citizens enabled the club to erect stands and fit out the Laurier Park in general until today it boasts more the aspect of a college gridiron.

Rusty Yarnell, the old fashioned maestro who starred for so many years on the East Boston eleven is in charge of the curriculum of the Laurier boys and should be able to present a worthy opposition next Sunday.

He has an eleven composed almost all college or former collegiate aces. It is possible that Rusty may make a bow at halfback to lend a little color to the occasion. He had that job on the Fittons for seven long years and although a few grey hairs are starting to make their presence known, Rusty still shakes a mean hip when he runs toward the end zone.

Although they have the home game on tap for the Rusty Yarnell Fittons will face the O-A Team at Abington on Columbus Day.

This game will mark the 11th meeting between the two teams. As usual the whole South Shore does its best to be on hand for the struggle with the boys from the big city.

LET'S KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT THIS FORD V-8

Look Here!

You can't beat a Ford V-8 for ECONOMY!

The Ford V-8 takes no more fuel than a 4-cylinder motor. It simply divides the four larger explosions into 8 smaller ones.

The V-type motor, with its two short banks of cylinders, cuts in half the distance the gas mixture must travel to the end cylinders in a straight eight. It reduces by one-third the distance it must travel in a six.

HAVERHILL AT MALDEN BIDS FOR CROWDS

By BILL CONNELL

A stonewall line, and sparkling backfield combinating at Everett high will through final practice today as they prepared for the advent of the smart and speedy Salem high eleven which invades Everett tomorrow.

The game, one of the finest attractions of this season, will draw a capacity crowd to the Everett stadium and to the head-liner of a great card of schoolboy games.

Havers go to Malden, Lynn Classical to Revere, Waltham to Somerville, Concord to Arlington, and Peabody to Marblehead in a few of the many snappy engagements.

BOTH UNBEATEN

Yet the Salem-Everett clash which pits two unbeaten and untied teams tops the card for sheer football value. With two of the finest teams to represent either school in years to

Everett should be the favorite with material so good that Coach Dewey Gidley terms the eleven a coming champion. Everett has three sets of backs, the weakest as capable as the best of most schools. And two complete lines of almost equal ability with a flock of ambitious substitutes.

Quarterback Joe Sweeney has backs Charley DuPont, John Rossetti, Nick Bellafatto, Joe Dee, Sam Genilla and Arthur Rose on whom fit are each equal to any of the schoolboys.

The line, from end to end, is a dream. Bill Ed Little is strong. So what price Salem in the game? Even money at game time.

Bill Brodericks Witches always are at least good. This year they are even better. Center and captain Charley Dolan is strong, very smart and a fighter down to the final whistle. The same could be written of any of his first team mates.

Bill Packham, quarterback, John Rubin, George Williamson, Sammy Mavrakos, Ed Haley, Archfield, rule Brodericks best. They defeated Lynn G. P. Apprentice, Keith Academy and New Bedford Vocational and had more stuff in each win than in the previous start.

Sir up the entire pass and you have one of the hottest teams at scoring and new bowl in the game. The game will come on field. The other finishes, or the winners, whatever The oil stands

MALDEN'S LINE FACTOR

A capacity crowd may fill the spacious Malden stadium for the Haverhill invasion. Both teams are unbeaten and though Haverhill was tied by Rindge Tech last Saturday it is a real threat to Malden's crown hopefuls. Malden's great line gives it an edge, a very slim edge in this go.

Lynn Classical's back at full strength, will have an unpleasant time at Everett tomorrow. Pegger Carroll's home team bowed to Newburyport last Saturday. The complicated Carroll attack was scrambled and defeated. The team was mediocre. It will not be against Classical which has its best hot Quarterback Benny Collier, one of the best Waltham, unbeaten may find the going mad at Somerville. The latter opened last week against second Malden yet held Malden to two touchdowns. Somerville is ready for big time and if the week-ends will force Waltham to be at its peak.

PEABODY TESTED

Eddie O'Connor's powerful Peabody eleven will get a real testing when it goes to Marblehead. Concord, the shock trooper against Beverly Arlington, but can make the game interesting.

Medford, confident after losing Brockton goes to Lynn Kelly with a chance to check the march of Tom Whelans home eleven. Cambridge Latin at Lawrence Amesbury at Lowell and Providence Central at Fitchburg are standouts of the out-of-town games.

Waltham at Newton is a thriller, even bet. Revere again Rindge Tech at Russell Field, another good game. Keith Academy at Lowell another. A good way to spend the leisure time afforded you by the NRA (if any) is to watch any of the above games, or your district's best, tomorrow afternoon.

Evidences Public Is in Stock Market Largely Lacking

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor Boston American

Trading in the stock market can be well described as very professional, with evidences that the public is "in" largely because of floor dealings account for as much as the larger turnovers prices are easily swayed. It should be remembered, however, that public interest in the market is [illegible] means lacking. They are not the people who are [illegible] "involuntary investors" [illegible] some day to recoup some of their losses. And others are [illegible] the proper signals for buying.

One of the main problems of industry in recent years has been the cutting down of seasonal losses through accidents to employees. Without question the most successful safety drives of the railroads, the aviation companies and the motor coach companies, the latter instituted by the Boston Elevated. The thought is brought to mind by the warning of Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan, who points out that October and November are the peak months for auto accidents. And calling for extra precaution on the part of motorists.

Morgan T. Ryan

Registrar Ryan declares one of the two main causes of highway accidents at this time is the change from daylight saving to standard time. This brings darkness an hour earlier, causing undue haste. It seems strange, therefore, that there has been no stronger effort made to lengthen the period of daylight saving.

One prominent financial service in Boston as of Sept. 30, picked the following dozen stocks as its favored leaders for buys

American Can	Continental Can
Amer Smelters	Chesa. & Ohio
U. S. Smelting	Corn Products
Stand. Oil of N. J.	Monsanto Chem
Chrysler	National Distil
Cerro de Pasco	Allied Chemical

Those who had visions of mass buying of steel rails by the railroads may as well dismiss them. Secretary Ickes has made it plain that railroad purchases of steel will be handled as an individual matter without consolidation of these requirements into any one big order. The public works administration will advance loans for these purchases to the individual railroads who will negotiate acquisition of the rails in line with the general policy outlined by the public works authorities

International products, such as wheat and cotton, have responded more readily to the shifts in the price of gold than purely domestic agricultural commodities. The latter have only recently begun to move upward. Some students believe that [illegible] six months time, if this is correct, a substantial upward move in purely domestic commodities may be anticipated.

STOCKS STEADY, WITH TRADING PACE SLOW

New York, Oct. 7(Leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange were generally steady today, with the pace of trading slow. The main body of shares exhibited a moderately strong tone.

In the second hours liquor shares were the strong spots in the list under the lead of National Distillers, which gained more than a point. Schulte preferred and common were unusually active on the news the company had disposed of its National Distillers stocks at a considerable profit.

Gold mining issues were strong with Dome Mines up nearly a point to a new high. Alaska Juneau and McIntyre were strong but showed lesser gains

There was little activity in the rail and utility shares which appeared to be digesting their gain scored Wednesday.

Celanese again demonstrated its volatility by spurting above 50 for the first time in several weeks to make a new high on the current movement. Allied Chemical also was strong and higher.

Farm implement and motor shares, including Case, International Harvester and Chrysler, were in moderate demand and gained fractions

Sales to noon approximated 600,000 shares.

In the first hour numerous issues registered moderate improvement. Repeat issues were in general demand, American Commercial Alcohol was up 2 and National Distillers nearly as much.

Celanese and International Shoe made 2-point gains, Homestake sold off 4 Point or better advances came for General Motors, Industrial Rayon, Allied Chemical and Brooklyn-Manhattan

U. S. Smelting and Peonie's Gas angered a point or more. U. S Steel and Chrysler sold up fractionally

Foreign exchanges showed an easier tone in relation to the dollar. The British pound sterling sagged off about ¼ cent at $4.75 and the French franc sagged .07 of a cent at 6.03 cents

Sales in 11 a. m. approximated 250,000 shares.

With President Roosevelt back at his desk in Washington, Wall street expected steps would be taken soon toward clarification of the credit and monetary situation. Many financial leaders feel that currency inflation, at least for the moment, is on the shelf In some quarters the belief is growing that the government will fight the recovery battle out along credit expansion lines and pass the inflation problem on to the next Congress.

Bankers were highly cheered by the anti-inflation attitude displayed by Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, upon his return from a European vacation. Equally encouraging was interest expressed in reports that Senator Robinson and Senator Carter Glass would become active in the next few days in organizing a "sound money" group in Congress

Thus the greatest stock market upview found that the recovery pace has become slower in recent days. Lower output, manufacturing operations, it was pointed out, has been aggravated by labor troubles. It was becoming apparent, the survey stated, that wages were lagging behind advancing prices While retail trade was holding around the previous week's level few gains were noted

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP)—All grain prices turned downward today after an irregular start. Corn led the decline, and soon fell almost 2 cents a bushel as a result of continued liquidation of December contracts. Corn started ⅛ off to ⅛ up, and subsequently underwent a general tumble. Opening at ¾ decline to ⅛ advance, wheat later receded all around

Books---and Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

An irate reader in Chicago—I like irate readers—calls me to account because I said here that Poe was a greater poet than Whittier. "That statement coming from a man of your intelligence," he adds, trying to put me to shame.

I still stick to my guns. Particularly as my critic resorts to this kind of foolish argument: "Poe, a drunkard, a sensualist, giving the world the ravings of a disordered brain—scarcely an uplifting line, and Whittier, the clean man who has comforted millions in his 'Snow Bound' and the 'Cry of a Lost Soul' alone are far superior to all Poe ever wrote—I'm just hoping that what I read in your letter, I

No, it was not a misprint. It was a carefully considered statement. I was judging each poet, as he should be judged, by his poetry alone, with no thought of the character of either man. But since my correspondent has brought up the subject, let me say that there has been done much to erase the hideous legend of Poe's dissipations. He was a strange genius, and, like many men with rare gifts, he sometimes resorted to over-indulgence; but that he was a drunkard is questionable. There is much evidence to prove that he was not. He loved his poor, unfortunate wife and lavished all that he possessed on her. He received a pittance of ten dollars for "The Raven," and with the proceeds bought blankets for his wife when she lay dying.

Whittier, on the contrary, except very early from a lonely farm life of drudgery and went out into the world as a editor, thinking for himself a decent living. He was in no sense a genius. The divine fire did not burn in him. He was a small love affairs which warped his Quaker spirit, and he became, in his virtuous respectability, a male counterpart of Mr. Podsnap. He told us so well in his fine biography. Is it to Whittier's credit that he caused certain women to fall desperately in love with him and then spurned them? I think he was a rather reprehensible character—a mistake.

All this however is beside the point when one comes to appraise his poetry. He was not, in my opinion, a poet of the first order. One had only to read his most famous poems to discover that. The monotonous measures of "Snow-Bound" and today's "Barbara Frietchie" and reverend to the Deity—Turner—and reverend to the Deity—are not to be compared with the "Conclave" or "The Bells." Poe, in his best work, had a music and a power of expression and range of emotion that Whittier never approached. Take the first stanza of "The Haunted Palace," and see how easy it is to discern a Whittier the mere jugg'er of commonplace words and images, and in Poe the singer with imagination and fire in his soul:

"On desperate seas long wont to roam,
Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,
Thy Naiad airs, have brought me home
To the glory that was Greece,
And the grandeur that was Rome."

If a poem like that came out of the gutter, then we should praise the gutter! But such a thing is impossible.

Thus the stupid world judges its artists.

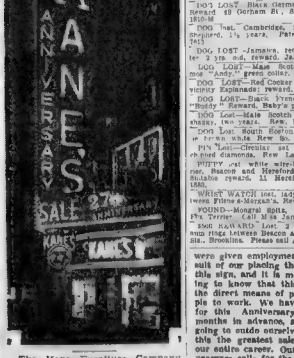
KANE'S BUILD HUGE SIGN



The Kane Furniture Company, in launching its 27th Anniversary Sale, has spent thousands of dollars in redecorating its buildings. Outstanding among the decorations is a huge electrical sign out side of the Boston store. The sign stands 85 feet high, and its glow can be seen from several blocks.

Mr Harry Kane president said, "I am told that 30 extra people were given employment, as a result of our placing the order for this sign, and it is most gratifying to know that this has been the direct means of putting people to work. We have planned for this Anniversary Sale for months in advance, and we are going to make everyone to make this the greatest sales event of our entire career. Our expansion program calls for the opening of many new stores, and this, too, will give work to many additional people. Every Kane store in New England is participating in this great Anniversary Sale, and with the aid of the NRA program, and the general optimistic feeling throughout the country, we are looking forward to a very bright future."

One Smiles, One Frowns

Which Will Win?

These faces are important to you, the smiling Dollfuss, who was shot by an assassin in Vienna, and the frowning Hitler.

The smiler or the frowner, or both might precipitate a war, disastrous to the white races. It might even be a war to which another collection of Americans, in office, would contribute millions of men and billions of dollars to be followed by a gigantic depression.

These faces are IMPORTANT to you, because they may mean trouble for YOU in future, or at least horrible trouble for Europe.

Hitler, dictator of Germany, creator of a certain imitation brand of Mussolini Fascism, would like to establish an "all German-Empire," to include Austria, or what was left of it after the Versailles Treaty.

Hitler then, if his dream should come true, would spread ing Alsace and Lorraine and colonies lost in the big war.

ing Alsace and Lorraine and colonies lost in the chig war.

But this smiling Dr. Dollfuss, who has his mild brand of Mussolini imitation, is an obstacle in Hitler's imaginary path "over many graves to glory."

The smiling Dollfuss says "No, thank you, Mr. Hitler. Austria is an OLD country, and crippled and dismembered as it is, it prefers to remain AUSTRIA. We do not want to be swallowed up in a Hitler wave that will pass and be forgotten while Germany goes on. We intend that Austria shall also go on. Perhaps decency and justice will give us back what we had. In any case, GOOD MORNING. You attend to Germany. I shall attend to Austria."

Just how it will end, history will tell!

Hitler and Dollfuss faces offer interesting contrast. One smiles nearly always, another frowns habitually. But frowns and smiles may be exaggerated as to their importance.

You know how magnificently the lion-tamer frowned when he was in the cage with his whip and revolver, not in the least frightened by huge monsters around him. And you remember how that same lion-tamer cringed later on when his wife came after him with a rolling-pin. It is easy to frown, and often constant frowning covers up assorted weaknesses.

Napoleon, Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great were real fighting geniuses, real soldiers and rulers of men. All three put together probably did not frown as much in all their lives as Mr. Hitler frowns in any one week.

And so, perhaps, the smiling Dollfuss will manage to keep Austria intact, while Hitler frowns his way through to whatever destiny may have in store for him.

Bootleggers Always

We'll Still Have Them

The group of Massachusetts legislators should not have been surprised by the bootlegging they discovered under the Canadian system of liquor control.

There has been bootlegging and there will be bootlegging under every system of liquor control devised by the hand of man since the old days, the saloons sold liquor to minors, they ignored the closing hours and they violated every regulation which was calculated to establish decency.

Under prohibition, the efforts to regulate liquor have been abominable. There has been bootlegging galore, hi-jacking, banditry, corruption, bribery and a carnival of cheating.

The Canadian system is believed to have been the most effective on this Continent to regulate liquor, but you can procure plenty of the stuff, outside the law, in the bootleg joints established in the towns and villages far removed from the legal city dispensaries.

The people of America realize that prohibition has been a dismal experiment and a notorious failure and they are determined to have some new system that may promote temperance and sobriety, establish respect for law and supply taxes to their government.

The lawmakers should not be astonished that bootlegging has existed under every form of liquor control ever devised, but in the light of this experience they should resolve to create in Massachusetts and elsewhere in the Nation a new system that will make bootlegging uncomfortable and unprosperous.

The government should have complete control of the new system to be established. It should control the quality of the spirits to be manufactured and dispensed and the prices as well as the methods of distribution. The profits from it should be moderate. The penalties for violation of the laws should be extreme.

If the legislators of Massachusetts will have this philosophy in mind, if they will only realize that the human avarice for unconscionable profits will attempt to violate any system, they will begin right in framing a system that will command respect. Otherwise their junkets will have been in vain, and costly to the taxpayers.

An Old Southern Gentleman Comes to the Party

The Old Dominion State has made the score thirty-two to nothing for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

In that State, we recall, Governor Pollard, for years a Dry, was opposed to a special repeal election because of the expense.

A petition signed by two-thirds of the members required him to call a special session of the Legislature, by which the election was ordered.

Governor Pollard yielded gracefully. He would not oppose public opinion in his own State.

More than that, with thirty-one States on record for repeal and none opposed, Governor Pollard did another graceful thing

Asserting that he would himself vote for repeal rather than oppose the public opinion of the nation, he asked that every Virginia elector do likewise.

The country should pay tribute to Governor Pollard and to fair-minded Virginia.

And the country will note with satisfaction that the repeal campaign is almost over.

On October 10th Florida votes. On November 7th five other States will go to the polls.

State and City Politics Halt Jobs Program

By James T. Williams, Jr.

State and municipal politics and politicians are one of the chief obstacles in the way of the federal government's effort to put jobless Americans to work on public projects North, East, South and West.

A flagrant example of this lamentable fact has just been dragged into the light by President Roosevelt's advisory board on public works.

Upon the recommendation of the board, the President, on June 22 last, made an emergency allotment of $400,000,000 for new construction on public roads.

New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Georgia, Illinois and California are among the 14 states that have not yet begun construction under this allotment.

Although the road projects in these 14 states have been approved by district engineers of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, the dilatoriness of state and local politicians in deciding which roads should be given priority, which of several projects should be approved and which rejected, has held up road construction from June 22 until the present time.

DENIED WORK

This means that thousands of unemployed citizens, urgently needing work for themselves and their dependents, have been denied work while greedy politicians fought among themselves for political plums.

Thirty-four states have begun their road construction and their needs of their citizens are now employed on these projects.

But the machinery of the government in the remaining 14 states has been the target for so many political monkey-wrenches that the unemployed citizens of those states are suffering while their politicians squabble.

This is the condition of affairs that prompted President Roosevelt to take drastic action. With his approval, the advisory board on public works has served notice on these delinquent states that they may lose their allotment unless road construction is started before the new year.

In an effort to make up for the time that has already been lost the administration has temporarily suspended many of its regulations governing construction work on secondary roads. These are the roads which feed into the 10 federal highway systems extending from the Atlantic seaboard to the Middle West, the eight federal highway systems that cross the Mississippi river and the six federal highway systems that reach to the Pacific Coast.

It would not have been necessary to order such an unprecedented suspension of regulations, designed to insure an honest and wise expenditure of public funds, had not political greed and the petty ambitions of local politicians cheated thousands of jobless men of honest work for the last three months.

WOULD RECALL LOAN

These 14 states in which new road construction has been blocked all through the summer by the machinations of pork-barrel politicians must end this delay. They must get this work going before snow flies.

If they do not the Roosevelt administration intends to withdraw this allotment and distribute it among the other states which have made a good record.

This would mean that California, Connecticut, Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey, Illinois, Pennsylvania and the other states that are in this delinquent group would lose the $150,781,000 allotted to them.

Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Nebraska, Washington, Texas and the other states where work now living on 10,000 miles of road construction would get the money.

When next the President calls the governors of the several states into conference at the White House the reorganization of their highway departments also will be on the agenda for discussion.

For as long as some states permit pork-barrel politicians to control these departments the unemployed will be denied employment and the taxpayer will see his taxes squandered.

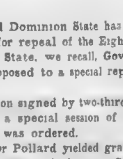
On the Open Road

Boardwalk at Night

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6—The Boardwalk's greatest hours, to my notion, are between 8 and 11 at night when the beaches are deserted and after-dinner crowds are in a saunter-ing, window-shopping humor. The majority of shops and stores are open until midnight and after.



O. O. McIntyre

There is an open gesturing for trade that gives a round-the-corner lure but it is never annoying. Salespeople catch the mood of the prowler and permit him to mosey the labyrinth of bazaars with no tagging at heels. Piers add a dazzle with the coil and flash of their electrical zip-boom-ah!

At night ballyhoo bands of cowgirls, midgets and Gypsies trumpet at entrances of the exhibits. And the old-time circus-barker with neckte diamond and hair in a lion tamer's roach is in his leather-lunged element. Above all, the lively cracks and skirl of the surf.

One finds, too, The Original Pup-nyman lathering hot dogs with mustard. A sandwich cave with Lew Tendler in red neon. Didn't he used to box Benny Leonard? Christenson's Stallions! Old-fashioned minstrels! The wild animal nursery! Bluch, and his clown pageant. America, indeed, at play!

All the auctions are not of jewelry as in Manhattan. Mostly they sell enormous rugs. Why tourists want to lug home such impedimenta is a question, but they do. At the rug auction are huge easels on which they are displayed while the muezzin beats their Syrian ancestry. Rugs to me have always been something to trip over, but after tuning in a while I came away with a definite rug for a rug, too.

Among a number of things not working along the shore is the salt shaker. Salt absorbs the moisture and becomes a rock-like clot. Scientific minds have tried to prevent this but one still has to chink it off. That is why so many shakers are found in the beach combings. Despairing guests over the breakfast eggs have suddenly turned to open windows and heaved ho.

* * *

Another problem is keeping clothes pressed. In 15 minutes after being returned from the presser they suggest a bag of soiled laundry. I tried out something in brown, fresh from the tailor, but before I reached the boardwalk suggested Lou Tellegen just dragged out of a well. Or Heywood Broun.

A character of the boardwalk is Captain Young, conducting the pier bearing his name. His high perched home straddlewise his pier bears the official address: "No. 1, Atlantic Ocean." Mail so addressed, with no other designation, has reached him from far-away Canstown. Captain Young, amazingly weather-wise, forecasts by stars. Often before official storm warnings go out he knows they are on the way and as a strolling Paul Revere prepares the city.

Now and then the sea casts up its dead. Last evening a fisherman was washed in. The body was quickly removed in a canvas bag. But such a tragedy creates a lull in bathing. Many of them, in the manner of steel workers after an accident, go home for the day.

* * *

Most of last night I spent in the coils of a pink-eyed octopus with balloons. A hot dog before retiring and I'd no sooner dropped off until a fellow yelled: "Sic 'im Rudy!" And the battle was on. I would have won, too, if surf-bathing didn't weaken me so.

Just Folks

Commonplace Lives

They say it calls for strength and grace
To glorify commonplace,
That humdrum living and the tasks
Which dreary duty daily asks,
To which no end on earth can be
Should crush the souls of men like me
But still with every meal we eat
There rings the children's laughter sweet,
Through every dull and dreary day
We hear the children at their play,
And when at night we sit to sup
'Tis good to see them growing up.
One need not pity us because
We miss the multitude's applause,
Not write our lives as boredom down
Because we gather no renown.
I know not what the Lord intends
For man beyond a few good friends,
A sheltering roof and peace of mind—
And these within our reach we find.
Though murder revelries we miss,
Time may bestow the greater bliss
Of splendid women and women grown
To pay for all the care we've known.
I am content to brave the day
And walk the dull and tedious way.
In flames which light our little fire
Lie dreams beyond our own desire.
The weary mother hums a song
Though tasks be many, hours be long,
And gladly borne is every ache
Of struggle for the children's sake.

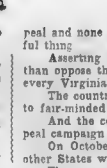
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

That Extra Time?

FIVE DAY WEEKS—here they come!

And with them, a new world. An entirely different world from that which Dad and Grand-dad knew. A world with leisure—a whole unchanted, unorganized day of leisure.



Elsie Robinson

Dad and Grand-dad had leisure, too—theoretically. But after Dad's eight or ten hours at the store or bench were over, there was the screen door to be mended, or the garage to be painted. For, chances were, Dad still lived in a Regular House, and had regular home responsibilities. Apartment house living, crowded cities, high rents, hadn't swept the old-fashioned home away.

And Grand-dad had even more family chores. When his twelve hours on the farm or at the factory were over, or when the winter "slack time" came, grand-dad turned cobbler or barber, tin-smith or carpenter. Half-soled the youngsters' shoes. Tinkered up Grandma's kettles. Built a spare bedroom.

Dad and Grand-dad had time off from their regular employment—but they never had time off from work.

That for 1883—1903. Now it's 1933. And the modern family feels that it's lucky if it can pay rent steady on a two-by-four perch on the upteenth floor of some sky-scraper. Screen doors to mend, chicken coops to build—don't make me laugh! The average Dad, today, has just about as many family chores as a trained flea. And just about as diversified a career!

From the moment he wakes in the moment he snores, Dad and all the rest of the gang live in a rut, with 120,000,000 other trained fleas. Just so many hours at the office or factory. Just so many minutes for commuting, for lunch, for gulping down a hasty supper in a crowded "breakfast nook." Then what next for the rest of the evening?

Well, he can read the paper and turn on the radio.

Or take the folks to the corner movie—

And now here comes a whole extra day of leisure.

Twenty-four hobo hours—all turned loose, with nowhere to go.

What are WE going to do with them?

What are YOU going to do with them?

Are you going to "do the same old things, with them?" Loaf around a little more, sleep a little later, play some more bridge, go to more movies?

Or will you put those hobo hours to work?

Will you take up some correspondence course with a state university or a business college—a course in office work, bookkeeping, stenography, journalism, engineering, commercial art—some subject which will prepare you to forge ahead when the better breaks come?

Or have you thought of getting an acre of land "somewhere a little way out"; taking up a serious study of soils, farming methods; looking ahead toward having a Real Place some day?

Oh, yes, it would be hard work. Fun at first, but then a lot of steady plugging. You'd have to be yourself down—and that's tough, with every one else playing. And a lot of the Good Time Charlies would laugh at you for plugging along—probably drop you from their date list. But—

Would it be worth it?

OR WOULDN'T IT?

Just how are you sizing it up? Here's life offering millions of us a brand new opportunity—a huge new wedge of life to do with as we please. So, then—

How will you fill in YOUR ticket? Let's hear. A lot of us will be listening.

Human Side of the News

Two Gray-Haired Girls of the Screen—Successes and Tragedies of Hollywood

By Edwin C. Hill

Who is the greatest actress on the screen? Garbo, the glamorous? Dietrich of the pulchritudinous extremities? Swanson of the sensuous eyes. As you please. But I nominate two gray-haired girls who could have been their grandmothers—two jolly plump gray-haired girls well along in their sixties whose figures are the least of their worries.

This comment springs from the delightful experience of hearing and seeing an unusually appealing motion picture, "Lady for a Day," produced from a short play by two long-time friend and colleague Damon Runyon. The bright and shining star of that picture throughout the character of an old apple woman, is May Robson, a fine stage actress for more than 50 years and now at a young age of the thoroughly great luminaries of motion pictures.

The other gray-haired girl, a great artist who is very much on the human side of the news, is Marie Dressler, currently revealing her magnificent talent for portraying human nature in the picture called "Tugboat Annie."

Marie Dressler was born in Canada and can't recollect the day when she was not a boisterous, jolly girl. She felt in the street one day and her expression was so comical that a shout of laughter went up when the crowd saw her rub her bruises. When she went on the stage she immediately had the laugh value of her comic fall and that was what the public wanted. She could sing—she created popular sunrise, terror, joy and dismay but the public kept demand ing those low comedy falls.

"I have fallen on some of the hardest stages in the world," Miss Dressler told me. As far back as the year Bryan first ran for President, she was making nearly good money. Then typhoid fever struck her down and nearly snatched her from this sinful world. A few years later she was penniless in London. Then she came back to Broadway in "Tillie's Nightmare" and a salary in four figures, while New York roared with glee.

It was only seven years ago, in the career of a gifted woman who has known strange ups and downs, that the world said she was through. Stage and screen yearned for pretty flappers. What price a stout and graying comedienne? No price at all. So out she went to Hollywood to scrabble a living from the picture studios, taking minor parts whenever she had the luck to get one.

And then one day a director cast her as the tragic-second old waterfront harridan in "Anna Christie." Garbo was the star, but it was Marie Dressler who walked away with the real honors of the picture. And since then, in one picture after another, she has been a star in her own right, with a salary of five thousand a week even in these thin times.

Looking back over her career, Miss Dressler said in "The Ugly Duckling":

"I was too homely for a primadonna and too big for a soubrette. However, the fact that I was never a beauty has, in a way, been of advantage. The upkeep of my face has never been heavy, and I have had no heartaches at seeing something vanish that I never possessed.

"I have never had to park my face in a cold-cream jar, and I never let a beauty parlor cramp my smile. Thank God, one thing saved to be marcelled to get a laugh!"

Bless these stout souls—these dear, old-fashioned girls who refuse to be licked no matter how the years bear down!

Hollywood! Restless sea of incredible success and tragic failure, what gay young lives have been wrecked upon its treacherous rocks! But if us of three grey that memory is most vivid. Three girls for whom life was too much. That dazzling beauty and flaming temperament that was Barbara La-Mar came out of the Imperial Valley to marry two husbands, all of whom forgave her only for leaving them, but for marrying them.

She was an exotic beauty, a glowing, heavy-scented rose. And her life was like that of a hot-house rose—fragrant blooming, lured beauty a heart-breaking falling of the petals. It was a vivid sensuous beauty matching her vivid, vital, vivid personality. When she came to her untimely end, forty women and men and women and women filled past her bier. Women fainted outside the church and were nearly trampled to death in the surging crowd.

Perhaps the most pathetic tragedy of Hollywood was the life and death of Mabel Normand, the hard-luck girl as they called her. She was one of the most gifted players that ever stepped before the cameras and one of the most generous. Sam Goldwyn tells the story of the time that his company was facing bankruptcy. Mabel went to him and handed him a long envelope. "Make it thousands," she boldly said. "Make it!" "My Liberty Bonds," she said lightly. "There's only fifty thousand dollars worth of them, but if they'll tide you over, they're yours."

Misfortune seemed to dog her tiny feet. She said herself that if there was on sprig of poison ivy in a field of four-leaved clover she would find it. Down it up She died at last—of tuberculosis. Just before she went she was told that she had only a few hours left. Bravely smiling, she replied "I know it. I can take it on the chin. I'm used to it."

But to me, because she was a closer friend, the saddest ending of all was that of Alma Rubens. She had a dark, smouldering loveliness which gave her a peculiar individuality and character. All her life, since a girl of fifteen, she had worked with a fierce intensity in one picture after another to support a crippled father and an invalid mother. It was a terrific, grinding labor, and finally "to keep up" she began to take morphine. And all the last years of her life she fought desperately to free herself from the tyrant that was destroying body and soul.

I saw her here in New York, still darkly beautiful, only a few months before she lost her fight forever. She said then: "I'll win! I'll win if it kills me!" It killed her—poor, lovely Alma. For that, as God best knew, was the only way that victory was possible.

Fashion is a development, not a whim. It is only when something unexpected catches the public interest that the styles change without apparent logic.

Past Favorites Seem Ill-Bred in Contrast to Present Elegance

By MARGARET MATSON

The winds of fashion are shifting. We speak now of the neckline and skirt before we consider the shoulders. Exaggerated effects are departures rather than the rule. The spring and summer styles that we welcomed so heartily seem hilariously naive in contrast with the mature elegance of the advance fashions today. Lines are simpler; distortions—there must always be a few—are more discreet; fabrics are more costly; furs and jewelry more abundant; and we in consequence must become more ladylike, more cultured.

Necklines Interest Us

A Rabbit's Wool Suit and a Miner's Cap

Manhoober our American turned French, is putting large flower, like pomegranates right under our chins. That's his way of emphasizing the high neckline. Posed like this, the flowers are able to cast delightful reflections into our faces and soften what might otherwise be a too severe line for many of us.

We're recognizing Russia these days regardless of Washington. Stand-up collars with little frogs to fasten them are very new. The Chinese and the ecclesiastical collars are other means toward the same end. In fact all kinds of stand-up collars, frilly or severe, softly up about your ears or stiffly so, are greatly in be desired. Necklines couldn't go higher if they tried.

And speaking of ecclesiastical the monk's cowl is exceptionally chic. One has it on her frocks, lined with color or with gold. And one has it on her evening wrap and there puts it to a good use in protecting one's coiffure.

In the evening we are likely to encircle our throats with coque feathers or ostrich and like it. Every first night audience is gay with feather boas, necklaces and epaulets.

May we invite you again to write or telephone for information concerning the stores who kindly loaned us the merchandise for those fashion photographs. The address: Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, or Liberty 4000.

Colors in so many of the woolens are too subtle for the camera to catch. The suit pictured above is in one of the new hairy woolens, the coat in a deep purplish blue while the dress is plaided in red and blue so close in value and so harmonious in hue that one would never suspect it from our reproduction. Her hat is of ribbed wool in a becoming adaptation of the miner's cap of which you have heard much.

Suit coats vary their lengths. Some are so brief they seem no more than a pair of sleeves. Others are hip-length banded with fur or sporting peri peplums of fur or fabrics. Others, on the other hand, are far longer. A very new length is that a little shorter than fingertip, with a decided flare from the beltline.

Full-Length Dinner Suit Is Perfect Exponent of the Times

Corseting Necessary

Only a correctly corseted figure can wear sheath lines effectively, but foundation garments have been designed that will mold anyone nearer to the ideal of the mode

Makeup Important

Make-up is important at any time. But now even portrait photography recognizes its efforts. The most interesting new use of make-up is a "screen make-up" for portrait purposes

She Done Us Wrong, Did She?

All the moaning comes from the slim youngsters nowadays. One must have curves or not be smart. Whenever there is a fashion show, one is aware that the "ideal" feminine form has undergone a change in the past few years—or perhaps in the past few months. Ever since Lady Lou took Paris by storm, the gowns that the latter has been designing for us are insistent upon more avoirdupois than the average young person has.

But this doesn't mean that we can go off our diets entirely. It means that more—and thinner—persons will have to take to them. Regular eating, sensible combinations of foods, plus a little exercise and plus perfect corseting are essential to the season's fashions.

The sheath or mermaid silhouette has been attributed to Mae West. So have the plumes and feathers, the revival of jewelry and all the rest of the return to elegance. If we like the sort of things that are being offered, we thank her. If we dislike them, we are likely to think that we, too, have been among those that she "done wrong."

For Every Costume

Lipsticks should be selected for every costume as carefully as a hat is chosen, as this dash of color can make or mar the finished appearance

White Ermine Adorns Glossy Black Bagheera

Above: A black dress. Everyone should have at least one to step into at a moment's notice. Black is again pre-eminently chic, and this in the exquisite fabric, bagheera, topped with white ermine is exceedingly attractive.

Clinging Lines

The mermaid silhouette swims into the fashion picture with clinging molded lines and a fish-tail train. And to complete the analogy, we have "fins" on our shoulders

Garment Derives Chic From Fabric

All the fashion world agrees with Chanel that a garment takes its smartness from its fabric. This year's coat fabrics have a new richness about them that makes them immediately successful. Many are so fine they need no furs to embellish them. There seems to be no fashion rule regarding the fabrics used, for Paris has been impartial in choosing

The SILHOUETTE

By Margaret Matson

NECKLINES are extremely high for all times of day. For sports one is likely to wear a crew or turtle neck sweater, a high collared jersey or tie silk blouse, perhaps a four-in-hand tie. For daytime town clothes there are the Chinese, the Russian, the ecclesiastical, and military collars, the drawstring neckline finished with a large soft bow, modernized versions of the collars of the King Louis' or Henry's, scarfs swathed about the throat or tied, knotted, or looped beneath the chin, ruffles, jabots, flowers, flutings, ruchings, and fur bows. For afternoon the throw-back effect of high in front, low in back is the favorite, and this holds for dinner clothes, hostess gowns, and informal evening frocks as well. It is only in the more pretentious evening gowns that one sees the deep decolletages that we are accustomed to associate with formality

SHOULDERS have lost their exaggeration and their excessive huskiness. What decoration remains on them is greatly modified, though by no means lost.

A WAISTLINE one must have. Feminine curves are an absolute necessity. And this means excellent corseting. Nipped, tucked, and fitted waistlines plus an emphasis upon "chesty" and "hippy" decorations assist in the illusion

YOU MAY EXPECT that much of the exaggeration that recently affected the shoulders will soon be seen in the treatment of the hips. Already there are suggestions for large Fur bands, flaring peplums, and enormous fur pockets, to say nothing of the luxurious fur cuffs

TUNICS and three-quarter or finger-tip length coats create a break in the silhouette that makes for what is sometimes termed the "reversed" silhouette—meaning that the width which has been at the top of the figure has, in these instances, shifted to the skirt.

HEMLINES continue to be about ten or eleven inches from the floor for daytime with a slight tendency to lengthen. For afternoon they frequently are three or four inches longer and sometimes reach the ankle. Slashes, trains, skirts that barely sweep the floor, some that are short in front and sink abruptly in the back, flounces, dust ruffles and the like are the one to choose from sundown to sun-up Above: Here is the dinner suit, a beautiful version! Suede cloth skirt and jacket, lame blouse high about the throat, and leopard to top off with. A hat is a necessity. This one is of suede cloth also, tucked and draped into a high effect.

Smart Women
Stand Out

In any social group it is always true that certain women stand out as being distinctively attired.

It may also be true that they are neither possessed of great beauty nor wealth. They know the art of correct dress as it applies to themselves, how to plan their styles—select nothing that is lacking in fineness of fabric—line—or workmanship—get precise matches; and assemble perfect ensembles.

It is invariably true that these women are dressed by Hickson. And they are safe in the hands of a staff critically accustomed to serving "Women Who Stand Out."

There is no price penalty for Hickson Style

Flounces and Tunics Are Romantic Revival

A Pleasure We Owe to M. Patou

Above: With the neckline squared off smartly and shoulders garnished with costly gold lame, here is a gown that is decidedly 1933. Moderate shoulders, slim sheath-like body that hints of the curves of Lady Lou, and then a quaint flounce and dust ruffle of the gold underneath. The skirt is just long enough in back to form what is called a demi-train. The idea came from Patou and is being adapted to our American tastes.

MAKEUP AT NEW PEAK

The makeup minded who are terribly-tired-of-it-all may now take a new lease on life. "Luminous" makeup is with us now, and seemingly to stay. The smart girls, or stars, if you will, down Hollywood way are responsible for this dewy, fresh and lovely makeup vogue. Among "those present" who have gone luminous-minded are two governors' wives. Which ought to prove something.

Luminous makeup demands more eye makeup than usual. There's one Hollywood cosmetic company that makes a luminous eye-shadow, too. So now you may "ensemble" your "luminosity." Users of the new make-up say it's ideal protection against sun and wind burn.

Alluring Are the Evening Coiffures

The French couturieres all have gone Mae West practically without exception in their evening clothes, which means a new romantic era in evening fashions.

Before the styles were launched they went to the foremost coiffeur to receive his stamp of approval and to receive from him his own sense of coiffure in regard to this "new-old" fashion.

He, believing that all fashion is a development and not a disjointed gesture, has long been leading up to the line necessary to carry this romantic era. His coiffures have ceased to be short. The hair is no longer clipped at the back, but brushed up into half sculptured curls.

The correct coiffure for this year 1933-1934 is far from a haphazard casual affair. The effect may be one of naturalness, but the technique involved is most intricate at the command of the great coiffeur. The little tendrils of curls are brought up to the point of the head, where they lie in ringlets. All of the sleek look has disappeared and soft curls have taken their place, over which big picture hats fit like flattering halos.

Right: The season's silhouette—high at the throat, broad but not too broad at the shoulders, slim of sleeve, belted at the waistline, and with a tunic "break" in an otherwise straight skirt. The satin is splashed with gold—"star dust," they call it.

May we invite you again to write or telephone for information concerning the stores who kindly loaned us the merchandise for those fashion photographs. The address: Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, or Liberty 4000.

'Star Dust,' This Gold Splashed Satin

Smart Shoes May Be Cut Higher

The high cut shoe is the one which marks a definitely new departure in footwear. The higher cut oxford, the high cut monk shoe and the high cut pump all have important places. Some of the oxfords are so high as to have five to eight holes. The spat type of shoe, fasten on one side with three buttons, is another feature.

Stubbier toes are becoming more and more fashionable every day. There is good reason for this. The fuller toe gives the foot a definitely smaller look and is extremely comfortable to wear. It is a fashion that appeals not only to the younger crowd but to conservative women as well.

FABRICS NEW

The day when the only good shoes were done in leather is over. This season there are the usual number of kids and suedes, but there are almost as many of the various fabrics. Interesting suede like fabrics are enjoying the limelight.

Above: Shoes and handbags usually match in the smarter costumes. Here suede is the chief material with brass trimming the circular bag and leather saddling the higher cut oxfords.

Tweeds Again Feature for Travel

Those sport coats which are usually called "travel coats" present one of the most interesting varieties of fabrics and colors we can ever recall for this type of garment. Tweeds are paramount, but in such a great selection of textures, finishes, and weaves, that you will be almost dazzled when you see what a tremendous choice you have. For one thing, bold patterns are seen at every turn, and plenty of checks and plaids give a bold aspect to the sport coat picture.

Herringbones and chevrons play their part, too, in little more exaggerated form than we are accustomed to seeing—probably a British influence—for it is a known fact that English sportswear makes the most of its woolen designs. But the newest of all fabric patterns, and one of which very effective use is made—is the stripe. We see, for example, narrow stripes running horizontally to form a deep yoke and upper sleeve section of a coat, the vertical stripes adapted to the loose swinging swagger portion from the shoulderblade line to the hem.

STRIPES ARE WORN

Newest of all, however, are the very broad stripes, which are called panels, because only three or four of them appear as the front and back portions of a single garment. For instance, a coat in shaded, or ombre rust panels, has a very deep tone for the center panel of the back, getting lighter and lighter to the edge from which it continues in two lighter panels. The front, in reverse, shows the darker panels as the two outer portions, the center part of the coat, slightly fitted through the waist, but so manipulated that the light panel hangs perfectly straight. A huge polar wolf collar completed this stunning fall and winter model.

WORK IS CLEVER

It is perfectly delightful to see how ingeniously these patterned fabrics can be worked to give slenderizing and interesting effects to garments, merely by means of seaming and clever cutting. All in all, the sport coat silhouette may be termed swagger—and only very rarely do we see the shoulder built up or padded in any way.

CONTRAST

Checked jacket and plain skirt—or vice versa, as you please. The contrast is what counts in these fall's outdoor fashions. We offer:

Hudson Seal Forgets Its Dignity

Lining, skirt and scarf of this outfit are of green nubbly wool while the coat is a swagger of Hudson seal. It is a new idea to have one's suit coat in reality a fur coat that can be worn with other frocks. In this particular ensemble the fur trims also the pockets of the skirt.

Swagger Fur Coat and Skirt Ensemble Is Effective

Very new, and certain to be a hit with the young college crowd are the new suits being presented with fur coats instead of cloth. There have been several versions of this fashion. First of all there is the suit that shows a pebbly wool skirt, and a short, swagger coat of Hudson seal. Extremely smart and just as practical, for it makes a costume that may be worn all winter long.

Another version is the skirt, short double-breasted jacket and beret to match worn with a seven-eighths length lapin swagger coat.

May we invite you again to write or telephone for information concerning the stores who kindly loaned us the merchandise for those fashion photographs. The address: Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, or Liberty 4000.

Young and Old Succumb to the Fascination of Feathers

Glamour Is Going to Heads

Ever since Barbara Hutton appeared with diamond stars in her hair, fashion has been adding decorations to her coiffures. Glamour is going to our heads!

It depends upon the daring of the individual to what degree the crowning devices are carried out. Some feel that one or two little stars poised among the waves and ringlets are sufficient. Others are taking to coronets of rhinestones, precious stones, or diamonds if they can. And the more the merrier. Just the other evening at the opening night of one of the local musical shows, a young person appeared with a large roll of rhinestones over her head. With little else by way of jewelry, there is nothing overdone or too exciting about it. It's all a piece with our return to personal ornamentation, elegance, magnificence and such.

Jewelry in the main is returning. Large brooches, clips, many bracelets and rings are again in order. If one wears a simple frock in the evening, she has an opportunity to load her arms with bracelets from wrist to elbow if she likes.

Mae West has been given the credit for the vogue. Do you remember in her picture, "She Done Him Wrong," what a fortune in diamonds. We need not be Lady Lous but we can again indulge our love of the glittering and the beautiful.

Gold, silver and many kinds of composition are the favorites for daytime. The choice depends entirely upon the costume with which the jewelry is to be worn. Intrinsic value is forgotten in the effort to procure precisely the right color and design.

The Feather Cockade Rises High

A velvet toque with a daring cockcade of burnt ostrich adds infinite dignity to an ensemble, especially when worn by a woman of somewhat advanced years.

Myriad Fabrics Comprise the Millinery Vogue; Felts Return

The hats this season have taken a bigger jump and landed higher. If you're feeling a bit jaded, go down and get one of the new brims, bonnets or berets and take a new lease on life. There is nothing more festive to celebrate a new deal than a new "lid."

All the new hats are trimmed. They have elaborate folds that look like trimming, pompons, bows, clips, fringe, veils, buttons, monkey fur used like aigrets or bird of paradise, and no end of feathers. There is also an imitation bird of paradise that is really marvelous and no one but an expert can tell the difference.

The materials that are particularly high style are velvet, antelope and santelope, a material resembling antelope and ever so soft looking and very flattering to the complexion. We've heard "Lady Lou" a lot, and the hats around town are gradually heading that way and are really charming. Slightly modified brims with tiny curled ostrich plumes around the face and up the back certainly make for glamour, and they are the perfect compliment for the new dinner dresses and striking afternoon costumes.

Berets have a smart newness; they are big and pancakey and can be shoved into all sorts of becoming angles. To be chic, however, they must maintain a high-in-the-back look. There is also a square beret that looks like a mortar board and is stunning in black velvet or kid caracul to match a swagger fur coat.

The new sleuch hats are devil-may-care and quite delightful. They are varied, too, and not like the uniform Greta Garbo type of other seasons. Tucks and folds run all over their crowns, and the new feather fancies for this type of hat are large without failing to be perky.

The feather toque is back with a ragged look that suits the urchin type or the ultra fashion conscious matron.

Large brims have been making their debut for some time and are finally well launched. With some of the new clothes there is nothing else that seems to suit, and after you get used to the idea they are fun for a change and terribly smart if worn correctly. Some of the big brimmed models have high crowns to boot. These are very stately and perfect for the large woman, as their size tends to make her look smaller. Out of the whole collection there is something becoming for every single type of woman, be she young or old. And that's a big thing in its favor, and a nice change.

New Method, Reduce as You Go

We hear a great deal about the slimming effect of massage. Here is a new one! Get a girdle that massages the flabbiness away as you go about your daily duties — a girdle so sleek that one delights to wear it constantly.

The idea is this: that the girdles are made of rubber perforated with tiny graduated holes, which while on the body create tiny vacuums that cling and massage as you move.

With each girdle there is a can of talcum powder to assist in putting the girdle on. One rolls it up like a stocking, pulling on the reinforced side seams to keep from injuring the garment itself. It's very simple and one of the newest ideas. Many of the smartest New York stores are featuring it.

To keep the girdle clean, it is an easy matter to "swish" it through lukewarm water, so they tell us. And they further advise that we do not dry it near heat or in the sun.

Here Is the Answer to Our Plea for Garters That Show No Trace

For years we have struggled with the lumpy garter showing through our clothes no matter how much pains we take to eliminate it. Girdle makers and garter makers have puzzled over the problem. At last some ingenious soul has found the answer. It's a rubber arrangement that opens up like a double garter. The stocking top is placed inside and the garter folded down. Then one turn or two and the stocking lies perfectly flat. If one is wearing a girdle, then what, you ask? Then there is another little arrangement that attaches itself to the girdle and to the garter and still maintains the flatness. It is difficult to explain on paper. The rubber garters are so elastic that they fairly breathe with the body, and therefore should not be binding. The little attachments come six in a package so that they may be attached to the girdle at that many places.

It's a great innovation and we say all hail to the person who invented it. This is a season of sheath silhouettes, of clinging fabrics, of little underwear. It is absolutely essential that no bumpy garter destroy the perfect line of the dress.

We used to suggest that one turn her garters over. That is, that instead of leaving them the lump side outside, that she turn the knob toward her skin. It isn't as comfortable that way and thus the girdle makers have never accepted the suggestion. Such a trick is, however, far more effective than none at all.

The average round garter binds because it is part fabric. This new sort is not, and so one's circulation as well as her sartorial perfection is saved!

No Change in Hosiery Colors

This season's colors may be divided into four families—the taupe and gunmetal tones, the brown and beige tones. In these four colors will be found the answer to every hosiery problem.

The classic gunmetal tones promise to be truly fashionable this season because of the importance of oxford and eel in the wardrobe. Taupe is also one of the shades that look new again because of its long absence. Taupe may be worn with the new eel and with all the grays of a brownish cast. Its very neutrality promises its becoming one of the favorite shades.

True beige shades are the choice of most women for wear with whits and evening pastels. The deeper browns, sometimes with a warm reddish blue, are best with brown frocks and the newer shades of rhumba, olivette and wine.

Many Frills on Newer Pajamas

Pajamas have become very frilly and flouncy this fall, with ruffles at the ankle, and tiny sleeves outlined in stiffened lace. One of the most popular motifs is to have the lace sewn around the top of the pajama to make it look like a separate jacket, although the garment is really all in one piece. In two piece pajamas, jackets or blouses sometimes have puff sleeves, and ruffled collars of lace which look like Pierrot outfits. All in all, there is a great similarity to nightgowns, pajama and negligee tops, the latter being the most elaborate.

The younger face is best suited when her ostrich feathers are supported by a rather wide brim sitting nearly straight across her brows. This of Chanel red felt with brass green, liquor brown and red plumes is very chic.

Boston Is Busy Knitting

Boston shops find plenty of new ideas in the knitting bag for fall, chiefly in those knitted three-piece suits and two-piece dresses with a classic, ageless chic that lasts as long as the clothes hang together. (And if you've ever owned a "knit," you know that it practically never wears out!

Naturally, the more hand knit your fall knitted outfit looks, the higher it scores. It is almost impossible to detect the fact that a garment is hand knit, however, so cleverly have designers introduced new stitches and different looking weaves.

The frill boucles, frosty, shaggy knits, very artful and artful copies of Shetland plaids and tweeds (for we go to British this fall in many of our knitted ideas)—all of these are unbelievably delightful, whether you take them in knitted long coated suits, jacket suits, dresses or those matching twins, the "ditto" sweater sets that are just about the jolliest things out for campus and active sports.

Ornaments Adorn Bags

There is a great deal of news coming every day from the world of handbags. The pouch shape is the one in greatest favor. This dressmaker type of bag may be carried with both tailored or afternoon clothes, which has a great deal to do with its popularity. Fabric bags are expected to be very smart and to give the classic leather bag some strong competition. Wool bags are especially smart in the daytime mode.

Velvet and satin bags are also highlights. They make smart running mates for the satin shoes and gloves which are so popular. They are delightfully graceful and elegant when shown with formal afternoon frocks.

Ornaments so elaborate as to be almost jewel pieces are seen in the more dressey type bags. Mirror ornaments are also very chic and make a lovely ensemble with the dresses that feature mirror jewelry trimming. Metal frames in both silver and gold finish are still the most important trimming that can be used on handbags.

The gay nineties and the early 1900's show their influence very strongly on the bags for formal wear. There are many velvets and satins with much beading or use of sequins. They are very quaint in their old-fashioned, new-fashioned look. Seed pearl bags are also very important. Brocades and uncut velvets are also scheduled for their share of evening activity this season.

Dresses With Jackets

Some of the most interesting suits are composed of dresses with jackets. These jackets may or may not match the dress beneath, but there is a color or fabric relationship between them.

Beaver Is Increasing in Favor

Leopard Coats Take Beaver Trims

Choice of Fur Coat Is a Difficult One Due to its Long Life

Even though you expect to wear your fur coat for several years, it is well not to be too conservative. Better to adore it for one season and tolerate it for the others than to mildly dislike it the whole time simply because it is too prosaic. This is the year when everyone is longing for a fur coat. Furs and the element of luxuriousness that prevades all of the clothes field are completely compatible. Furs are essential. That is why we are seeing so many fur-trimmed dresses, fur-trimmed suits, and separate furs.

Even though their prices are going up—and what prices aren't?—it is still wise to contemplate their purchase.

One of the most popular furs with those who can afford them are the minks, both Eastern and Jap. We have pictured a superb mink coat on our front cover.

Next in popularity come the caracule, broadtails, kidskins, usually topped with a generous portion of silver, cross, or platinum fox.

Then there are the Persian lambs, better to our minds for trimmings than for entire coats.

Beaver is coming toward the front. One of the smartest fur coats seen recently was a beaver swagger with a very small collar and very generous lap. A sports coat, of course, and destined to attend every football game with automobile or airplane reach. Under it one would assuredly find a woolen frock or a suit that was equally smart.

The leopard coats are better this year and more popular than ever before. And most often they are accompanied by beaver collar and cuffs.

Mink gills is a new fur. Mink, but not like the pelts we usually see. The gills are the sides of the throat, very soft and somewhat lighter in color than regular mink. Mink paws is another newcomer, somewhat like mink gills, and taken, as the name indicates, from the paws.

Summer ermine is being used. And when we speak of ermine we are reminded of the magnificent ermine evenings wraps seen recently in a local style revue. Utterly perfect!

The fur coat silhouette has not changed materially. It seldom does. The shoulders are still a trifle broad which is flattering to the figure, but there is none of the exaggeration of last year. Though we advise against too much conservatism, we protest strongly against too tricky effects in garments that cost as much as does a fur coat.

The wear you expect to give a fur coat, and the places you expect to wear it, should be the first considerations in the purchase of a fur coat. Some furs are hale and hardy and can stand much knock around wear, while others must be treated carefully and lovingly. Sturdiest among the sports furs is raccoon.

Those coats are lavished at collegiates and those who dash back weekends to see the team defend their alma mater. While they are still made along free, swinging lines, they are mere shadows of their bulky 1929 forerunners.

Another popular coat for sports types is lapin. This year shades of gray have been added to brown and beige.

Coat Sleeves Given 'New' Look

Much care has been taken in the new fur coats so that while sleeves look new, they are not faddish. Usually fur coat sleeves introduce fullness above the elbow and taper off to a slimness at the wrist. Some sleeves have a point at the top, which may be worn in the style seen in so many coats and dresses, or the point may be tucked in, making a softly draped sleeve top. Sleeves must be well and generously cut to insure comfort when worn with frocks with rather bulky shoulder lines. A few coats introduce whole yokes of contrast.

Broad Lines in Sleek Furs

The broad shoulder line looks best in furs that are sleek, especially in broadtail kidskin, Russian caracul. These furs are as soft as a piece of silk, and are as easily manipulated. One broadtail coat adapts the tray collar from Schiaparelli. It is decidedly wearable, and not at all the type collar which will have to be entirely remade next season. There are scent ties, and monk collars which are decidedly smart. In the long haired furs, such as fox, the collars are often adjustable to two or three different styles.

All Pianos Are Modelled After The Chickering

Without exception, all fine pianos of the world have adopted the use of the full metal plate, the overstrung scale, and other developments originated by Chickering. That they should have complimented Chickering in this way is a tribute to the genius of Chickering craftsmanship and leadership.
